Foreword

It is with the utmost presumption that I venture to write a foreword to Mr. Suleiman Haim's latest achievement in the field of lexicography. I do so mainly to publish, on behalf of all English-speaking students of Persian, a well deserved gratitude to Mr. Haim, not only for the present valuable work, but also for his past efforts.

The present work is the result of 30 years endeavour in a field of tremendous importance both for the student seeking a wider understanding of Iranian thought and literature and for the translator. It is gratifying that Mr. Haim has been wise enough to hesitate no longer to publish the results of his years of collecting. The writer's own experience in this field has proved after only two years' work that the field is apparently inexhaustible and the tendency to hesitate in publishing an inevitably incomplete work fatal, for the collector may well hesitate too long. Fortunately Mr. Haim has no longer delayed in producing a book which is an indispensable tool for anybody concerned with the Persian language.

Proverbs in Persian are in no sense part of a moribund folk-lore kept alive artificially by the curious. They, and the idioms which, as Mr. Haim remarks, are so often difficult to distinguish from proverbs, are part and parcel of the living speech of every Iranian. This book will be particularly indispensable for the student of modern Persian literature, for, in a conscious effort to reproduce living speech in their works, notable Persian authors of the last half century have tended more and more to use these proverbs and sayings, for the explanation of which ordinary dictionaries afford little help.

However, not only the student of modern Persian literature must be interested in this important aspect of Persian. A point of considerable interest in Mr. Haim's Preface is his remark that the folk-lore represented by these proverbs is in many instances more ancient than literature itself. Here he hints at the problem of how much in the great Iranian classical poets is in fact culled from the popular speech of the poets' own time and earlier. It is clear that to understand the classical poets fully the student must be as familiar as possible with Iranian speech, particularly as there is evidence that this has changed little in essentials through many centuries. The importance of Mr. Haim's collection is that it provides a key to these essentials of great value to the foreigner who is unable to spend a long time in Iran.

Great indeed is our debt to Mr. Haim for having produced such a work and for having done so much thereby to fill a very serious gap in the equipment of the student of this great language and people.

Preface

The present work aims principally at providing foreigners interested in Persian folk-lore, and especially the English-speaking students of our language and literature, with a handbook containing and explaining the commonest and the most important Persian proverbs. Undoubtedly, it also affords a useful source for Iranian students in their study of English, by way of giving them a key to the methods of translation.

A proper proverb or saying should contain a universal truth originating from a particular instance, often based on a fable; however, a great variety of sayings and quotations, even maxims, mottos, and aphorisms, has developed into proverbs. (Cf. Solomon's Book of Proverbs in the Old Testament). Besides, there are the idioms and idiomatic phrases, which the compilers of proverbs of other languages have incorporated in their works, as it has been noticed in a few books on English proverbs consulted by the author during the compilation of the present work. Indeed, there are frequent cases where it is impossible to draw a fast line between proverbial and idiomatic phrases. Nevertheless, in an attempt to separate the proverbs from the idioms, this book has been arranged so as to contain two parts dealing separately with these two categories, although, owing to the difficulties mentioned, readers may find cases where confusion has been unavoidable.

Perhaps this is the first time that a bilingual collection of this size has been presented to the public, dealing with our proverbs, written alphabetically in the original Persian, translated freely or literally, and enriched by numerous notes and mother stories. The famous collection of proverbs by Ali-Akbar Dehkhoda, which has served as my guide ☉ chiefly for purposes of collation and selection, is in Persian only, while a few English books dealing on the subject have omitted the original Persian text, or else have given a very limited number of our proverbs. It must, however, be acknowledged that none of the works so far produced in this field can claim to be exhaustive, much less if we turn our minds to the provincial sayings and phrases, which are common throughout the extensive country of Iran, but which are mostly beyond the reach of a single student residing in one locality.

The following shows the plan adopted for dealing with the English side of this book: -

1) A literal translation has been given where it was thought this would evoke some response in the English mind or imagination.

2) A free translation has been given where a literal one would result in an ambiguity or sound ridiculous in English, while at the same time certain portions of the original have been translated literally as an aid in making the proverb more intelligible.

3) In order to assist Iranian students, an attempt has been made, within the author's knowledge of English, strengthened in this regard by the perusal of English books on proverbs, to insert the exact, or nearly exact, English equivalents of the Persian entries, or at least phrases which bear some similarity to, or may be considered as parallels of, the Persian proverbs. Admittedly, a good many of the English equivalents seem to be archaic and/or obsolete, but they should preserve at all events their intrinsic value as equivalents.

4) Where English equivalents were wanting, and the translations were found to be insufficient to bring out the proper meaning of the Persian, resort has been made

☉ The bulk of the entries in this book was compiled gradually during a quarter of a century through "hearing and picking" in the days when Dehkhoda's work had not appeared, which work was used as a guide when the present book began to be printed.

to parenthetical explanations with special reference to the instance where a proverb would be cited.

5) The fables or anecdotes, which have given birth to certain proverbs, have mostly been related with some briefness. Many of these have been versified by the famous poets and moralists, Sa'di, Mowlavi, and others, reflecting in some instances the well-known fact that popular folk-lore, of which the proverbs are representatives, are more ancient than literature itself. This book contains no less than 112 anecdotes, each given immediately after the proverb springing therefrom, but omits as irrelevant such anecdotes as have been based on, or invented to confirm the applicability of, the proverbs.

6) There are many cross-references from one item to another, where these fall more or less under the same category of thought.

7) The Notes appended to the proverbs serve either as a glossary to explain difficult words, grammatical points, and proper names, or give variants for many of the proverbs, as it is a fate of common sayings to undergo changes in the arrangement of their words, and even in their very structure. This is especially true of those proverbs which have descended to us traditionally, and which, up to recent times, had not been committed to writing. The Persian entries having been arranged in their alphabetical order, the variant forms deviating from such order had of necessity to be mentioned.

With regard to Part Two, which contains mostly idioms, in view of the fact that a few friends have objected to my having inserted therein mere groups of words, which were not of a proverbial nature, and fell within the scope of ordinary dictionaries, I wish to explain that these are collocations which could be covered by the term "idiom" ❁, as their literal translation would not make good sense. A few examples are قید چیز را زدن - سر هم دادن - دست از آستین در آوردن - پا در هوا - بازی در آوردن - دستت را بگذار روی دلت - چنگی بدل نمیزند - پیسی بسر کسی در آوردن - and even the ordinary collocations راه افتادن - رفع و رجوع کردن - بسته است به - باقی آوردن - دید زدن - ریش گذاشتن - پیدایش نشد - دید زدن etc. etc. As it will be seen from the English translations of these, while there are cases of similarity between the English and the Persian proverbs, in so far as the central thought is concerned, there exists a wide gulf between the English and the Persian idioms or collocations; hence the necessity of treating the latter separately.

❁ one definition of "idiom" being an expression the meanings of which cannot be derived as a whole from the conjoined meanings of its elements. — Webster's New International Dictionary.

Finally, I have to offer my heartiest thanks to all those friends who have given me their unsparing assistance, while being consulted on the genuineness of certain proverbs, on the correct meanings and true sources of these, or on their best English renderings, for which latter I am partly indebted to Mrs. Edith Johnson, an English scholar of Persian, whose acquaintance I had the honour to make during her sojourn in Iran. And, as I have no pretensions whatever to having produced a perfectly desirable work, especially because of the errors that have slipped in owing to the printing difficulties, I crave the sympathetic consideration of the public for any sins of omission and commission, and earnestly invite Persian and English scholars to perfect the work after me, the former to improve on the Persian side, and the latter to fill in the gaps left for English equivalents.

دیناچه

کرد آوردندگان امثال در زبانهای مختلف ضرب‌المثل را مظهر و نمایندهٔ فولکلور (folk-lore) یعنی افسانه‌ها و عقاید و رسوم باستانی دانسته و در بارهٔ اهمیت آن و

امثال در فارسی و انگلیسی

نفوذی که در زبان هر ملت دارد فراوان سخن رانده‌اند و در واقع مجالی باقی نمانده است که چیزی بدان مزید کردد الا اینکه زبان فارسی چون از پیش از هزار سال تا امروز تقریباً بیک حال باقی مانده امثال باستانی را بهتر محفوظ داشته است و از این جهت در فارسی امروز بیشتر ضرب‌المثل مصرف میشود تا ثلاثاً در زبان انگلیسی که در هر یک یا دو قرن دستخوش تغییر گردیده بطوری که امروزه در زبان انگلیسی با آنکه اصطلاحات و استعارات آن تقریباً نامحدود است کمتر ضرب‌المثل بکار میرود و فقط بعمودی امثال خیلی متعارفی قناعت میشود. مشاهدهٔ خود مؤلف حین تالیف این مجموعه این بود که عده‌ای از انگلیسی‌ها بخصوص طبقه جوان با قسمت اعظم امثالی که از کتابهای انگلیسی استخراج و بعنوان «معادل» برای امثال فارسی انتخاب شده بود آشنائی نداشتند و حال آنکه دامنه امثال انگلیسی که اکثراً از شعرای قدیم انگلستان بجا مانده یا از کتاب مقدس اقتباس شده بسیار وسیع است.

دلیل دیگر این عدم آشنائی اینست که بعضی از کیفیات قدیم که امثال بر محور آنها میگردد مثلاً آنچه مربوط به الاغ و قاطر و آسیاب و آفتابه و مکتب و صدها موضوعات دیگر میباشد در دنیای امروزی انگلستان و سایر کشورهای مترقی و بخصوص در بین مردم شهر نشین کمتر مشاهده میشوند چه رسد بچیزهایی که از اصل در آن کشورها وجود نداشته از قبیل شتر و ساربان و کدخدا و درویش و چادر سیاه زنان و غیره غیره.

اما بقتضای آنکه گروهی فولکلور و امثال را با موازین اخلاقی مرتبط ساخته‌اند کلمه‌ای چند منبأ توضیح باید

امثال و اخلاق

نوشته شود. در هر مثل یا داستانی که موجب پیدایش آن گردیده حکمتی نهفته که آنرا روی در مصلحتی است بدین معنی که هر طور مصلحت اقتضا کند مثالی بر زبان رانده میشود بدون اینکه گوینده بخواهد آن مثل را میزانی برای اخلاق مجرد قرار دهد گویی ایراد مثل یک نوع استشهاد است که موجب تشفی خاطر متکلم گشته او را حق بجانب نشان میدهد چنانکه در مورد اشعار نیز همین کیفیت حکم فرما است و هر کس شعری در ضمن بیان خود نقل کرد آنرا مؤید اظهارات خود میدانند. بهر حال اخلاق، اگر تعریف آن عفت در پندار و گفتار و کردار باشد، از موضوع فولکلور یا امثال ناشی از آن مجزاست و موارد بسیاری نیز هست که

ضرب‌المثل‌ها در قالب عبارات مستهجن و عاری از عفت درآمده‌اند چنانکه ذکر آنها شرم‌آور است (ولی حذف آنها هم شکاف و نقیصه‌ای را بوجود می‌آورد). علاوه بر این امثال از حیث معانی ضدّ و نقیض هائی دارند که اخذ نتیجه قطعی از آنها کار آسانی نیست بلکه هر کدام در مقام خود ارزش و جلوه خاصی پیدا میکنند. تاخیر و عجله، خنده و گریه (۱) و بسیار اعمال متناقض دیگر بیک اندازه تقبیح گردیده و با وجود اینکه در يك جا نداری را با هزار عیب توأم دانسته در جای دیگر فقیر را تسلی داده بشرط داشتن دل غنی تبرئه میکند (۲).

منظور اصلی مؤلف

منظور اصلی از تالیف این کتاب که بعد از تهیه چندین فرهنگ از انگلیسی به فارسی و بعکس توفیق آن نصیب اینجانب گردید این بود که بیگانگان انگلیسی زبان را با امثال فارسی بصورتی که هست یعنی قطع نظر از کیفیاتی که در بالا تشریح گردید (و سایر زبانها نیز در آن سهیم هستند) آشنا سازد تا طرز فکر ایرانی را در لباس ضرب‌المثل بتوانند با طرز فکر خود مقایسه کنند و از این رهگذر احساسات مشترك و تفاهمی بین شرق و غرب ایجاد شود و این همان هدفی است که مستشرقین نیز از طریق بحث در زبان‌های شرقی و غربی بسوی آن قدم زده‌اند. کیست که از مقایسه ضرب‌المثل‌های فارسی با انگلیسی و کشف هم‌فکری سازندگان این مثل‌ها و مخصوصاً تشابه لفظی امثال دو زبان لذت ادبی برنگیرد؟ در ایران دیکه بدیکه میگوید رویت سیاه، در انگلستان دیکه این حرف را به کنلی میزند (صفحه ۲۲۵). ایرانی عاقبت اندیش معتقد است که سیم سفید را برای روز سیاه باید نگاهداشت، انگلیسی که متمول‌تر است طلای درخشان بجای سیم سفید می‌گذارد (صفحه ۲۷۱). شیخ سعدی بسیری مردن را به از گرسنگی خوردن میدانند، انگلیسی هم راضی است که شکمش بترکد و خور و نوش لذیذ از چنگش بیرون نرود (صفحه ۶۹). خواجه حافظ میگوید «فریب جهان قصه روشن است» در امثال انگلیسی وارد است که «فریبی بیای فریب جهان نیرسد» (صفحه ۳۰۹). مواردی که يك فکر در دو لباس مختلف لفظی جلوه گر میشود نیز بسیار جالب توجه است. مثلاً انگلیسی یازده مهتر را برای يك اسب يك چشمی مایه تعجب میدانند ولی ایرانی برای يك حمام خرابه چهل جامه‌دار را زیاد و بی تناسب میدانند (صفحه ۴۴۹). ایرانی معتقد است که برای روغن ریخته که دیگر جمع نمیشود نباید تأسف خورد، انگلیسی میگوید برای شیری که ریخت نباید گریست (صفحه ۲۳۹). يك نگاه اجمالی به فهرست آخر کتاب این هم‌فکری‌ها و همانندی‌ها را بخوبی روشن ساخته ضمناً فرصت خوبی برای يك تفریح ادبی بدست میدهد. شماره هائی که در این فهرست در جلو مواد گذاشته شده نشان میدهد که عبارات انگلیسی در کدام صفحات پیدا میشوند و معادل چه عبارات فارسی هستند. از اینرو میتوان فهرست انگلیسی را بمنزله يك مجموعه امثال انگلیسی به فارسی دانست که عکس مجموعه فعلی باشد.

(۱) « اندر پس هر خنده دو صد گریه مهیا است » و

فایده ضمنی

اما پس از اقدام بجمع آوری و شروع به ترجمه امثال فارسی بزودی معلوم گردید که این مجموعه برای مترجمین و دانش آموزان ایرانی که بتحصیل زبان انگلیسی اشتغال دارند نیز سودمند و قابل استفاده خواهد بود و خدمتی را انجام میدهد که ممکن است فرهنگ های دو زبانه معمولی از آن قاصر باشند. برای کمک به تامین این فایده ضمنی مؤلف لازم دانست بخشی مشتمل بر اصطلاحات فارسی نیز بامعادل انگلیسی آنها ضمیمه کتاب نماید (۱) مقصود از «اصطلاح» از لحاظ این کتاب اولاً عبارتی است که استعاره و مجازی در آن بکار رفته یا اساساً یک تعبیر مثلی باشد و ثانیاً عبارتی است که ترجمه تحت اللفظی آن معنی آنرا بخوبی روشن ن سازد و آنچه که در زبان انگلیسی idiom نامیده میشود بیشتر متضمن دسته دوم است.

الفاظ و اصطلاحات عامیانه

ورود در مبحث اصطلاحات موجب شد که پاره ای الفاظ و عبارات عامیانه (slang) و آنچه که اختصاص به محاوره دارد (colloquial) نیز درج شود زیرا اگرچه استعمال اینگونه الفاظ را بقول بعضی از ادبا نباید تشویق نمود لکن با چنان قوتی در زبان های زنده و مترقی رخنه می کنند که جلوگیری از آن غیر ممکن و از حدود صلاحیت افراد خارج است.

اشکالات ویژه

یک تالیف دو زبانه مانند جمع آوری و ترجمه امثال فارسی اشکالات ویژه ای را در بردارد که از آن جمله است تثبیت معنی و مورد استعمال فکری که باید ترجمه شود و سپس ترجمه صحیح آن بزبان دیگر. اینجانب اکثر امثال این کتاب را بتدریج در ظرف بیست و پنج سال یا بیشتر از راه گوش فرا گرفته جمع و ترجمه میکردم تا اینکه امثال و حکم چهار جلدی آقای دهخدا منتشر شد و آسمان ادبیات ایران را روشن ساخت. ارزش این تالیف و زحمتی که این دانشمند بزرگ در جمع آوری مواد آن کشیده غیر قابل انکار است و برای این بنده هم از لحاظ تطبیق و گلچینی راهنمای خوبی شد لکن طبیعی است که بمنظور اینجانب در تالیف این کتاب کمک زیادی نمی نمود زیرا در بسیاری از موارد نویسنده ارجمند «امثال و حکم» در ذکر معنی و مورد استعمال امثال ساکت مانده و صرفاً بدرج آنها قناعت کرده بودند. از اینرو صحت مورد استعمال در نزد اینجانب منحصر به آن دسته از امثال بود که شخصاً از توده مردم بخصوص از زبان زنان شنیده بودم. برای بقیه همواره با دوستان و آشنایان مشورت میکردم و گاهی این و آنرا در سر یک مثل «بهم می انداختم». قدر مسلم این بود که طبقات مختلف مردم و حتی خانواده های مختلف برای یک مثل معانی مختلفی را قائل بودند. این یکی از اشکالات کار و ناشی از عدم تثبیت امثال فارسی بود. با همه این احوال یک نکته را بجرأت میتوان گفت و آن اینست که اهل هر کشور با امثال کشور خود بیشتر آشنا هستند و معانی آنها را بهتر از یکسانگان تشخیص میدهند. یک نفر ایرانی که ضرب المثلی را از زبان خردی بارها از دهان

(۱) آقایان باروخ و داود بروخیم ناشرین تالیفات فرهنگی اینجانب پس ازوقوف به فایده ضمنی این مجموعه یعنی سودمندی آن برای دانش آموزان ایرانی بیشتر به نشر آن تعریص گردیدند و باوجود قطور شدن کتاب از بدل سرمایه در اینراه دریغ ننمودند و جای آن دارد که عالم مطبوعات کشور خود را رهین این منت بدانند.

هم وطنان خود شنیده است نه تنها مورد استعمال آنرا میدانند بلکه لطف معنی و زیبایی آنرا نیز بخوبی درک میکنند و این مطلب در مورد امثالی که ذارای وزن و قافیه یا سوابق تاریخی یا جنبه مذهبی هستند بیشتر صدق میکند. رجوع شود به امثالی که بر الفاظ امام و امامزاده و شمر و علی و عمر و معاویه و خردجال و زکوة و حلوی نذری و فاتحه و غیره غیره بنا شده‌اند. متأسفانه مشاهده شده است که بعضی از خارجی‌ها که امثال فارسی را ترجمه کرده‌اند در پاره‌ای موارد حساس راه خطا پیموده و از عهده تشخیص معانی صحیح برنیامده‌اند. کار این اشخاص را فقط از یک حیث میتوان مورد اعتبار قرار داد که هر مثل فارسی را که خوب بفهمند خوب هم میتوانند بزبان خود ترجمه کنند. عکس این مدعا نیز صحیح است یعنی یک نفر ایرانی مانند یک نفر انگلیسی بدک لطافت یا مورد استعمال یک مثل انگلیسی نمیتواند نائل شود مگر آنکه عبری را بتحصیل زبان انگلیسی یا در اقامت در کشور های انگلیسی زبان صرف کرده باشد.

یک اشکال دیگر که بستگی با ترتیب الفبائی امثال داشت این بود که بعضی امثال در افواه مردم صورت های مختلف پیدا کرده بود بقسمی که ترتیب مزبور را بهم میزد و مؤلف ناچار بود از اینکه هر شکل مختلف را در ذیل یک تبصره و یا در مقام الفبائی خود آن شکل درج کند و نیز برای بهتر فهماندن مورد استعمال بعضی امثال که از داستانهای ناشی شده‌اند خود آن داستانها را درج و اختصاراً به انگلیسی ترجمه نماید. امید است این قسمت نیز برای محصلین زبان انگلیسی خالی از فایده نباشد و کسانی که بعد از مؤلف به تالیف چنین مجموعه یا تکمیل همین مجموعه می‌پردازند به پیدا کردن داستانهای بیشتری که امثال از آنها پدید آمده‌اند فائق آیند.

ترجمه امثال

سه قسم ترجمه برای در آوردن امثال فارسی بزبان انگلیسی بکار رفته است: اول ترجمه تحت اللفظی برای فهماندن طرز فکر شرقی ب مردم انگلیسی زبان. دوم ترجمه آزاد با تعویض لغات و تقدیم و تاخیر عبارات تا از طرفی بگوش خارجیان مطبوع تر و از طرف دیگر دانش آموزان را برای ترجمه آزاد تمرینی مفید باشد. سوم درج معادل های انگلیسی به اندازه ای که مؤلف در طول سالهای متبادی طی تحصیل زبان یا جستجوی کتابهای انگلیسی بدست آورده بود. در حال حاضر برای متجاوز از نصف امثال و بیش از دو سوم اصطلاحات معادل های انگلیسی درج گردیده و در دیباچه انگلیسی اذ دانشمندان بزرگ انگلیسی زبان دعوت شده است که از این پس بکوشند تا برای تمام امثال و اصطلاحات فارسی معادل های انگلیسی بدست آورند.

سپاسگزاری

تالیفات دو زبانه از قبیل فرهنگ لغات یا اصطلاحات یا ضرب المثل و امثال آن معمولاً از عهده یک نفر به تنهایی بر نمی‌آید چه این یک نفر یا در تشخیص معانی و یا در پیدا کردن معادل های صحیح در زبان دیگر با اشکالات عدیده روبرو میشود از طرفی هم نشستن چند نفر باهم و همکاری در آن واحد متضمن اشکالات دیگری میباشد و اگر یک نفر با سلیقه و اسلوب مخصوص بخود اقدام نماید کار بهتر و زودتر انجام می‌پذیرد. برای توأم کردن این دو شق مؤلف چاره‌ای جز استمداد از رفقای مطلع و با ذوق نداشته و اکنون که توفیق تکمیل کتاب حاصل شده وقت آن رسیده است که از همه آن رفقا بخصوص از آقای هلی اشرف شیبانی همقطار اداری خود قلباً سپاسگزاری نماید.

is as follows}:

A Sunnite was once engaged in a controversy with a Shiite to whom he finally said , “ You must know that on the last day our master, Omar, will ride on a camel, and that the camel will be driven by Ali, whose follower you are.”
“ But ” , replied the Shiite most shrewdly , “ if Ali is the camel-driver, he knows best where to lead the camel ” .
“ And where will he lead our Master ? ” asked the Sunnite who was becoming impatient. “ Straight to hell ” was the smart reply.

اول پاداراش را خورم بی پا هاش سر جاشه
T. I will eat first those which have legs; those which have no legs will stay where they are {provincial dialect}. {From the following anecdote}:

A certain Lur was buying some raisins at a grocer's shop. On seeing a few beetles among the raisins, he put them one by one into his mouth, saying, "I will eat first those which have legs, for those which have no legs will stay where they are". {This is now often cited by one who eats first what is less likely to be left at the table, etc.}.

اول پیاله و هورد
T. The first glass and dregs! ? {Used when bad results arrive unexpectedly early}. Cf. پیاله اول etc.

اول چاه را بکن بعد منار را بدزد
F. T. Do not steal the minaret before you have dug a pit to hide it in.

E. E. a) You are a fool to steal, if you can't conceal.
b) Count the cost (before the undertaking). Cf. also Look before you leap.

Note. The infinitive phrase حاه نکنده منار دزدیدن which means "To steal the minaret before one has dug a pit (to hide it in)" is of frequent usage, but the E. E. given above should be adapted accordingly.

اول خویش دوم درویش T. First one's own and then the poor.
E. E. Charity begins at home. Cf. چراغی که بخانه etc.

! این امامزاده ایست که با هم ساختیم! F. T. Why! Isn't this the shrine which we have built together? [From the following anecdote]:

Two men spread the story that they had both seen in their dreams one of the descendants of the Imams appear in a certain locality. The credulous inhabitants then allowed them to build a shrine there and undertake its custodianship.

In this way the impostors managed to make a good living, and all went well until one day there arose an open quarrel between them. One of the partners, in an attempt to justify himself before the crowd watching them, pointed to the shrine and swore, "By this holy shrine the facts are as I state them", upon which his partner grew angry and disclosed their secret by saying, "Why! Isn't this the shrine which we have built together?"

این مال من این مال منبر اینهم مال ننه قنبر T. This one is for me, the other goes to the pulpit, and the third is the share of Ghambar's mother.

Note. منبر which is here rendered "pulpit", originally means a raised, wooden structure for a preacher, and this seems to have belonged in this case to the preacher himself. Similarly, Ghambar seems to have been his own son. It results, therefore, that the preacher, while distributing a certain present, was appropriating all of it to himself and his family, although seemingly to different persons. The phrase is usually said to an unfair and selfish distributor.

ب

با آب حمام ضیافت کردن T. To give a feast with water from a public bath (i. e. to entertain at no cost).

E. E. a) Cheating play never thrives. b) Honesty is the best policy.

بازار باز آر F. T. In the market one should get good value for one's money.

Note. This phrase shows a kind of popular etymology based on a pun, as بازار means "market" and باز آر means "Bring back", the idea being that one should bring back something worth his money from the market, as, for example, one might say, "Market" is a contraction of "mart" and "get".

T. With soft words one may persuade a serpent out of its hole. {Gentle means are always best}. Cf. بنرمی درآید etc.

T. Everything goes back to its origin.

E. E. a) Blood will tell. b) What is bred in the bone will come out of the flesh.

F. T. Better a lucky arm than a strong one. Cf. اگر بهر سر مویت etc.

F. T. Playing involves breaking; (even) the breaking of one's head (i. e. if one must play, one must be prepared for the consequences).

Notes. 1) This is what children cry in chorus when one of their playmates has sustained an injury, intending thereby to put him in good spirits. 2) اشکنک and سر شکستن are diminutive forms of اشکن and سر شکستن respectively, the former being a provincialism for شکن which is the imperative or verbal noun from شکستن "to break", and the latter meaning "to have one's head broken". Cf. the E. All fellows in football.

F. T. You may play as you wish, but will you play even with your papa's beard? {This means that one must draw the line somewhere}.

Note. In the East the beard is considered sacred, and to even touch a man's beard is an insult.

T. The king's horse has been called a pack-horse. {Said to, or of, one who takes offence at a

بس قامت خوش که زیر چادر باشد چون بازکنی مادر مادر باشد {سعدی}
F. T. Many a slender form you see beneath the veil; when you lift the veil you find it is a grandmother.

Notes. 1) قامت originally means "stature".

2) " Veil ", as used here, is not what Europeans generally understand by it; it is a free translation of چادر which is originally a large sheet of cloth used by women to cover their whole body and dress (the Anglo-Indian spelling of it being "chuddar"). The late king, Reza-Shah Pahlavi, attempted to abolish the چادر, but even to-day it is being worn by a large proportion of women.

neck crooked ? ”

بشتر مرغ گفتند بار ببر گفت مرغم گفتند پرواز کن گفت شترم
F. T. When told to carry a load , the ostrich was a bird ;
when told to fly , he was a camel.

Note. شتر مرغ which is the P. word for “ ostrich ” , literally means “ camel-bird ” ; hence how the bird’s excuse is seemingly justified.

بشیرین زبانی و لطف و خوشی توانی که فیلی بموئی کشی { سعدی }
F. T. With the aid of soft speech and gentle means one may lead the elephant by a hair. Cf. با زبان خوش etc.

F. T. Better sail in a ship which is in bad condition than to do a thing in haste. Cf. العجلة etc.

بکلافی داخل خریداران یوسف شدن F. T. To enlist oneself among the purchasers of Joseph with a mere skein. {From the following Islamic tradition}:

When Joseph was brought in Egypt, Pharaoh ordered him to be sold by auction. While the rich merchants present were outbidding one another, a poor old woman appeared among the crowd, and held up a skein of silk, which was her only possession, and with which she offered to purchase Joseph.

On being laughed at by the present bidders whose exorbitant bids had proved of no avail, the old woman said, "I know too well that my insignificant offer could not fetch the handsome slave, but I wish to have my name put down in history among the adorers of his beauty-one who is ready to offer her all in order to obtain him.

بکن هر آنچه بشاید نه هر چه بتوانی [سعدی] T. Do what ought to be done, not what you can.

E. E. a) Do what thou ought; let come what may. b) Do not all you can; spend not all you have; believe not all you hear; and tell not all you can.

T. Roses will not grow from the willow by effort; nor will a negro become white by bathing.

E. E. You cannot wash a blackamoor white.

T. Doesn't it harm any one's cow or sheep? {From the following anecdote}:

A townsman went to a village on some business. At noon when it is customary in Moslem towns to recite the Azan, i. e. the call to prayer, he began to perform this service in a loud voice. One of the villagers, who up to that time had not heard the Azan, asked his fellow-villagers, "What is this man doing?" "He is calling people to prayer", they replied. "Doesn't it harm any one's cow or sheep?" he asked. They said, "No". "Then", he replied, "let him do what he likes.

Another version of the story, which makes the villager a Lur (or native of Luristan), and, as a result of which the Lur asks in his provincial dialect, سی گوسپندهای ما ضرر ناره؟ makes the story more pleasant.

F. T. When they said to the beggar, "Welcome", he came forward with his bag in his hand.

E. E. Give him an inch, and he will take an ell (or yard).

F. T. Just give me half a chance (lit. let me get in), and you will see what I can do. [Quoted with reference to the hidden powers of one who is not in a position to display them].

Cf. آب نمی بیند etc.

Note. A variant form of this pvb. is بگذار خودم را جا کنم etc.

بگر به گفتند گهت برای درمان خوب است خاک رویش کرد T. When they said to the cat, "Thy excrement is as good as a remedy", she buried it. {Used when some one refuses from pride to display a talent, or give away something possessed by him, after it has been much praised}.

F. T. If you want others to do what you say, first do it yourself.

***

بگمانش علی آباد شهری است
T. He thinks Ali-Abad is a town (i. e. he is expecting too much).

Notes. (1) Ali-Abad is the name of several villages in Iran. (2) Some people make this pvb. read بگمانش است علی آباد دهی i. e. "He thinks Ali-Abad is a village", in which case by "village" is meant apparently "a productive village or estate".

بگنجشک گفتند منار بشکمت گفت چیزی بگو بگنجد
F. T. They cursed the sparrow, wishing his belly to be transfixed by a minaret. He said, "You ought to have said something that is believable, for lack of capacity in this case makes your curse impossible of realisation." {Quoted in cases when exaggerated remarks are made}.

***

یاسین بگوش خر خواندن
T. To read the chapter of Yassin

in an ass's ear.

E. E. To play a lyre in vain to an ass.

Note. ياسين is the name of a certain Surah (or chapter) of the Koran.

بگو مبین چشم برهم می نهیم بگو مشنو پنبه بگوش می گذارم لیکن
اگر بگوئی نفهم نمی توانم F. T. If you say, "Do not see",
I will close my eyes; if you say, "Do not hear", I will put cotton in my ears; but if you say, "Do not understand", this is impossible.

بگیر و ببند (و) بده دست پهلوان T. Catch him and tie him, and (then) give him up to the athlete. {Quoted ironically when a man, who has pretended to be an athlete, or otherwise able to do any specified thing, has indeed done nothing, but wishes to claim to himself the fruit of the labour of others who have succeeded in doing it}.

بلا چو عام بود دلکش است و مستحسن [فآنی] T. When calamity comes to all; it is pleasant and acceptable.

E. E. a) A company in distress makes sorrow less. b) Company in misery makes it light.

Note. A familiar phrase to the same effect is ظلم بالسویه عدل است.

بلا که مرد ازان گو قحط نمیگردد F. T. If Balal dies, there are still others who could call people to prayer.

Note. Balal is the name of a black man who, at the time of the Prophet, used to serve as His special Muezzin, i. e. one who calls people to prayer. This pvb. is quoted when a person thinks he is the only one who can do a specified thing.

ببلان خاموش و خر در خر است T. The nightingales are silent and the ass is braying. {Used when some one with an unpleasant voice is singing}.

Note. I have frequently heard the variant ببلان خاموش که خر خر میکند

i. e. "Keep silent, O nightingales, for the ass is braying".

This is more piquant, but the form given above is a regular hemistich.

بلبل هفت بچه می گذارد یکیش بلبل میشود T. The nightingale hatches five eggs, but only one of the brood becomes a nightingale. { This means that out of several children belonging to the same parents usually one becomes a worthy or courageous person } .

بلبلیش بلبل است یا لندوک است پر در نیاورده یا پیر است پر ریزانده F. T. There is no doubt in its being a nightingale ; but it is either unfledged as yet , or it has grown old and shed its feathers. {From the following anecdote } :

Some rustics in Ghazvin found a frog in the field and took it for a nightingale. But , as they were doubtful about it , they went to Dakhow (a contraction of دهخدا - the headman of a village ) , and asked his opinion thereon. Dakhow said, “ As for its being a nightingale, so much is certain, but it is either unfledged as yet , or it has grown old and shed its feathers ” .

Notes. ( 1 ) This is now cited when one wishes to lay stress on the fact that some part of a proposition is certain, but it is also used when two alternatives proposed to a question are both wrong. ( 2 ) The ordinary sense in which the word لندوک is used nowadays is “lank or lanky” . In this pvb. , however , it has been used in the sense of an unfledged chicken.

بلد نیستم راحت جان است F. T. To say, “ I don't know how to do it ” is a good excuse for resting from work ( lit. is a comfort to the soul ) .

بلعنت خدا نمی ارزد E. E. It is not worth a damn ; it is not worth a curse ( lit. a curse from God ) .

بلقمان حکمت آموزی چه باشد F. T. Why teach wisdom to Aesop ? E. E. Don't teach your grandmothers to suck eggs.

Note. Loghman, who is said to have been a contemporary of King David, may be regarded as the eastern Aesop.

بلکه را کاشتند سبز نشد T. They sowed "perhaps" (or "if"), but it didn't grow. { As for the nature of the word بلکه see Note. (1) under the next entry }.

بلکه من کاریده بودم (بلکه) شتر توهم چریده بود F. T. (Imagine what would have happened) if I had cultivated the field and your camel had grazed in it { From the following anecdote } :

A certain camel-driver let loose his camel in an uncultivated field belonging to another. The owner of the field came up and began to beat the camel. The camel-driver said, "Why do you beat the camel for no good reason, since there is no grass on the field?" "But", replied the field-owner, "I might have cultivated the field, and your camel might have grazed in it; imagine what would have happened then!"

Notes. (1) From the above it appears that بلکه in addition to "perhaps and rather", means "if, supposing that", and the like. (2) کاریدن is a provincialism for کاشتن "to sow or cultivate".

بله دیگه بله چغندر (Tur. & P.) F. T. Such a beetroot for such a pot. { From the following anecdote } :

A man said, "In our village they grow beetroots as large as houses". A few seconds later some one else present said, "In my native town they make cooking-pots as large as mosques". "What ever for?" said the first man. "To cook your beetroots", was the reply.

Another version of the story runs thus :

A man said, "In my native town they make cooking-pots as large as mosques", and another said, "In our village they grow beetroots as large as houses". "Where can these beetroots be cooked?" asked the first man. "In the pots made in your town", was the reply.

بمال نازی شیئی بحسن نازی تویی T. Shouldst thou boast of thy wealth and beauty, a single night will give away the former, and a single fever will mar the latter.

Note. "A single night" is an allusion to one's properties being stolen in one night.

Note. Variant forms of the above pvb. are

بهالت مناز بیک شب بند است بحسنت مناز بیک تب بند است

(i. e. Boast not of your wealth, for it hangs on a single night, etc.), and برمال و جمال خویش etc.

بماه میگوید تو درنیا تا من درآیم F. T. She says to the moon, "Let me shine first before you do". {Said in praise of a woman's beauty}.

بمرگ بگیر تا بتب راضی شود T. Threaten him with death, so that he may be content with fever (i. e. by imposing hard conditions on some one you may force him to accept easier ones). Cf. ازمرگ گرفتند etc.

بمیر و بدم T. Die and blow. {From the following anecdote}.

The blacksmith's boy, who had become tired of blowing the bellows in a standing posture, said he wanted to sit and blow. "All right", said the blacksmith, "sit and blow". A few minutes later the boy was again tired and asked, "May I lie on my sides and blow?" "Yes", said the master, "you may do so". The third time the boy asked, "May I blow lying on my face?" at which the blacksmith said in despair, "Die (if you like), but blow".

Note. بمیر و بدم, although originally meaning "Die and blow", as was shown in the anecdote, is nowadays mostly used as a noun or as an adverbial phrase to mean "(working and toiling) to the very last minute of one's life". Cf. the E. To die in harness.

بناکار مفرمای کار T. Do not assign work to the unexperienced.

Note. Sa'di has for the above بناکار دیده مفرمای کار which is a regular hemistich.

بناپاك زاده مداريد اميد كه زنگي به شستن نگرود سفيد {فردوسی}
T. Rely not on him who was born on the wrong side of the blanket; for the negro does not become white by washing.

E. E. You cannot wash a blackamoor white. Cf. بکوشش نروید etc. and also the E. phrase "He washes the Ethiopian".

بنام آزموده See under مفرمای کار

بنام ما بگام تو See under بنام حسنی بگام حسینی

F. T. You pretend to want it for me, but mean to gratify yourself. Cf. بیهانه بچه etc.

Note. I have seen also the vulgar form بنام حسنی بگام حسینی where the proper names are diminutive forms of حسن and حسین respectively.

E. E. (a) She is a woman of easy virtue. بند تنبانش شل است
(b) She's loose in the hilts.

T. Her pyjama's cord is loose.

Notes. (1) The expression may be used also of a man who is (inclined to be) unchaste, and refers sometimes to a person's heretical disposition.

(2) تنبان is for men "loose breeches", and for women "a long loose skirt" (now obsolete).

T. Our dam has been washed away by water (i. e. we are ruined; it is all up with us).

T. A slave bought with money is more free than he who is a slave to his stomach.

T. To undermine the wall and plaster the house-top (i. e. to improve the outward at the cost of the very foundation, or to be hypocritically destructive).

b) You cannot wash a blackamoor white ( or There is no washing a blackamoor white ).

E. E. He has one foot in the grave.

T. One can smell the odour of his "halva".

Notes. (1) حلوا is a kind of soft, sweet paste, which, on the death of a person, is distributed free of cost by his relatives among people so that they may pray for his soul.

(2) The expression بوی حلوا گرفتن is also in common use, and may be rendered "to have one foot in the grave".

T. He smells of mother's milk ( i. e.
he is a mere stripling ).

T. He has smelled roast meat but does not know that an ass is being branded. [Said in cases when some one is under a disillusion ].

T. The odour of the musk cannot be concealed ( i. e. Virtue will in the end be known to all ).

✽ ✽ ✽

T. A good temper is better than a beautiful face.

بهر دو نان منت دو نان چرا؟ T. Why be obliged to the base for two loaves of bread? Cf. بگرسنگی مردن etc.

Note. The beauty of the P., which is lost in the E. translation, lies in the assimilated words دو نان "two loaves of bread" and دو نان "base people". Hence the following free translation may be preferred:

Why bend to the base one's head,

In obligation for one's bread? .

بهر کجا که روی آسمان همین رنگ است T. Wherever you go the sky has the same colour (i. e. travelling to other places will not change cause and effect).

بهر یک گل منت صد خار میباید کشید F. T. For the sake of a single rose one must endure the pain of a hundred thorns. Cf. نابرده رنج etc.

E. E. No pains, no gains.

بہزار و یک دلیل، اولش آنکه باروت نداشتم T. For a thousand and one reasons, the first of which is that I had no gunpowder. [From the following anecdote]:

An artillery-man, being asked once by his general why he had failed to fire a gun on a certain occasion, answered, "For a thousand and one reasons". "Let us hear the first reason", said the general. "The first is", said the artillery-man, "that I had no gunpowder". Whereupon the general said, "You need not mention the remaining one-thousand reasons".

Notes. (1) Another version of the anecdote makes the number one-thousand, which is then reduced by the general to nine-hundred and ninety-nine.

(2) The anecdote is intended to show that one good reason is better than several unsubstantial ones.

بہشت آنجا است کازاری نباشد کسی کاری نباشد

T. Heaven is that place where no one harms, or interferes with, his fellow-men.

بہشت به سرزنش نمی آرد F. T. The joy of Heaven is not worth being reproached for the favour.

Note. سرزنش is sometimes replaced by منت which means "obligation".

T. بهشت را به بها نمیدهند به بهانه میدهند for a price; it is given for special reasons.

Note. بهانه means an excuse or pretext, which is not a suitable word here, though it gives a literary aspect to the P. saying, as the first بها, together with the negative particle in نمیدهند make a pun with بهانه.

با همه پلاس ( Same as همه پلاس به منهم پلاس ! )

T. به میدهد ده بگیرد He gives a quince in order to get a village.

E. E. He throws out a sprat to catch a herring ( or mackerel ).

Note. In view of the riming words ٤ and ٥ , the French pvb. " Donner un œuf pour avoir un bœuf " , which means "To give an egg in order to get a cow" better approaches the P. in neatness.

F. T. بهیچ آبی نمی خیسند [ Said of one who is adamant on some point ].

Note. خیسیدن originally means "to soak".

T. بی ادب با هزار کس تنها است [ شهید بلخی ] is (always) solitary, though he be with a thousand.

F. T. بی پولی است و حلقه بگوش فلک کند even the Firmament to slavery. Cf. آنچه شیران را etc. and the E. pvb. Hunger will tame a lion.

"Why?" they asked him. "Because", he said, "had I given a little vinegar to every one who asked, it would not be seven years old."

بيگاري به از بيگاري است T. Forced labour is better than unemployment (or idleness).

Note. Those who do not believe in doing anything for nothing turn around بيگاري and بيگاري making the pvb. read بيگاري به از بيگاري which is what the British believe, for I have seen the E. pvb. "Better sit idle than work for nought".

بی گدار به آب زدن T. To dash into the water without (looking for) the ford.

E. E. To leap before one looks.

Note. This is grammatically adapted from the more usual form, "Look before you leap".

بیلش هزار من آب برمیدارد T. His spade will take up a thousand maunds of water (i. e. He is a man of great influence).

بیمار تیمار میخواهد T. A sick person needs attendance.

Note. It is the riming words تیمار and بیمار which gives a proverbial shape to this saying.

بیماریکه تیمار دارد طبییش ناخوانده آید T. When a sick man is being well tended, his doctor comes uninvited (i. e. he is not needed).

بی مایه فطیر است T. Where there is no yeast (i. e. leaven), the bread becomes unleavened. (Freely) Capital is the leaven of business.

Note. مایه or more fully خمیر مایه means yeast, but مایه originally means the capital or essential part of anything.

بی می کسیرا خمار کردن T. To give one the hang-over, but not the wine itself (i. e. to cause one to suffer the evil consequences of anything without allowing him to be benefited by its advantages).

بین الاحباب تسقط الّا داب (A.) T. Between friends ceremonies disappear (lit. fall down).

ب

پا بیخت خود زدن T. To kick away one's luck (i. e. to forfeit one's chance).

پاپوش برای شیطان میدوزد T. He sews footwear for the Devil (i. e. he is very cunning).

Note. As the figurative sense of پاپوش is "entanglement" or "difficulty", the above phrase means really "He involves even the Devil into difficulty".

پا توی کفش کسی کردن T. To put one's foot into another man's shoe.

E. E. To poke one's nose into another man's affairs.

پا توی يك کفش کردن T. To put one's feet in one shoe (i. e. to take up an obstinate or uncompromising attitude).

Note. A near E. parallel would perhaps be "to harp on one (or on the same) string".

پا تهی گشتن به است از کفش تنگ [مولوی] T. Better to walk barefoot than to wear tight shoes.

Note. By the expression "tight shoes" Mowlavi alludes to an ill-matched wife, and this is confirmed by the second hemistich which is رنج غربت به که اندر خانه گنج "To suffer in exile is better than to have strife at home".

پا در هوا حرف زدن T. To talk with one's feet in (or toward) the air.

E. E. Not to have a leg to stand on.

پیمانہ اش لبریز شد (Same as the preceding with a replacement of پر "full" by لبریز "overflowing").

***

پی نخود سیاه فرستان T. To send (some one) to fetch black peas.

Notes. (1) This message is given to a child when the sender wishes the recipient, who understands the message, to keep the child out of the way. Hence, the expression is used to mean “getting rid of some one by means of a subterfuge”. (2) The E. proverbs “To send (some one) for yard-wide pack-thread” and “to send (some one) on a fool’s errand” have been suggested for use as equivalents, but I believe the first of these is more of an equivalent.

پیه چیز را به (تن) خود مالیدن T. To rub one’s body with the tallow got from something (i. e. To anticipate, or be ready to run, a risk, and stand the consequences thereof).

تا تو فکر رخت بکنی نه نه مرا سیا بخت میکنی نه نه
F. T. If you think too long about my trousseau, mother, my chance will be lost.

Note. (1) سیاه بخت which is a contraction of سیاه بخت means "unlucky". (2) In spite of this contraction the rythm of this verse is unsound.

تا تو کوک کنی ما رنکش را هم زده ایم
F. T. By the time you tune we shall have ended the finale.

E. E. Some would play a tune before you can tune your fiddle.

Note. رنگ is the last part of a musical performance, which, being of a quick tempo, is designed for dancing.

تا جان هست امید هست
While there is life there is hope.

تاجر ترسنده طبع ریشیه جان در طلب نی سود بیند نی زیان {مولوی}

F. T. A merchant who is too timid to take a risk will make neither profit nor loss.

تا کودکان بر آوردم دیگر کودکی نکردم [سعدی] F. T. Since I have had children, I have given up childish ways.

تا کور شود هر آنکه نتواند دید T. Let him become blind who cannot bear to see (others' success). [From the following story]:

Two ravens happened to meet a tortoise with whom they made friends. One day the tortoise asked his new friends to lift him up in the air, so that he might get an idea of what the higher regions looked like. "We shall be willing to do so", said the ravens, "provided you keep consistently silent throughout the flight". When the tortoise agreed to this, they took a stick and told him to hold it firmly in the middle by his teeth, while each one of them would hold one end of the stick by its bill. This agreed, all three friends flew into the air, and passed on successfully for a time.

All who saw the birds and the tortoise in the air, expressed their wonder at the trick, which had enabled the latter to fly, but he paid no attention to them and managed to keep his mouth closed. At length, when certain children in a locality began to shout, "Behold how nicely the tortoise is being carried in the air", the silly animal, whose patience had been exhausted by this time, opened his mouth to say, "Let him become blind who cannot bear to see my success". Of course no sooner had he opened his mouth than he fell to the ground.

Note. The phrase بکوری چشم دشمن, which means "in spite of the enemy", is of frequent use, and the phrase تا کور شود هر آنکه نتواند دید is now used to avert, so to speak, the evil eye of one who is jealous of others' success, while it has no regard to the unlucky fate of the tortoise in the story, which has been related in the famous book of کلیله و دمنه Kalileh & Demneh.

تا که احمق باقی است اندر جهان
F. T. As long as fools are still found in the world, why should the poor be needing bread? Cf. تا ابله در جهان است etc.

تا که از جانب معشوقه نباشد کشتی کوشش عاشق بیچاره بجائی نرسد
T. Unless there is susceptibility (lit. attraction) on the part of the beloved, the efforts of the lover are in vain.

تا گفته ای غلام توام می فروشت
F. T. As soon as you say to some one, "I am your slave", he will put you on sale.

Notes. (1) The first hemistich to this is با مردم زمانه
q. v. (2) می فروشت is a contraction of می فروشدت (they sell thee), which would destroy the rythm. It is also the colloquial way of pronouncing می فروشدت (3) The meaning of this pvb. is the same as that given for تا خم شده ای etc.

تا گوساله گاو شود دل صاحبش آب شود
F. T. By the time the calf has grown into a cow, the farmer has given up hope.
[Referring to the numerous sufferings of mothers in bringing up their children].

T. Until
a man has spoken, his faults and virtues remain hidden.

تا می توانی ورجه چون نتوانی فروجه
F. T. So far as possible jump up; when this is no longer possible, come down.
[Practical lesson for making the best of our chances].

Note. ورجه & فروجه are imperatives of ورجستن and فروجستن respectively, and, taken together, make a compound word - ورجه فروجه - which means "gambol or frolic ” .

تا نازکش داری نازکن نداری پایت را درازکن T. As long as you have some one who will bear your airs , put on such airs ; if you have none , stretch your legs ( i. e. lie down and give up ) .

تا نباشد چوب تر فرمان نبرد گاو و خر T. Where there is not a fresh-cut stick , the ox and the ass will not obey .
E. E. It is the raised stick that makes the dog obey. Cf. A rod for the fool , a nod for the wise.

Note. The P. phraseology given above seems to be a corruption by the vulgar of گاونبردی چوب تر فرمان گاو و خر which is a regular hemistich. The word نبرد is too short to render the rythm of the hemistich sound.

تا نباشد چیز کی مردم نگویند چیزها E. E. (a) There is no smoke without fire. (b) Where there are bees there is honey.
T. Unless there were something ever so small in it, people would not say things.

Note. The word نگویند is too long to go with the rythm of this hemistich.

training received in childhood }.

تاوان قمار را قمار میدهد F. T. Gambling losses are compensated by more gambling.

Note. I perfectly agree with Dehkhoda in that this is a most noxious saying, as it encourages the ruinous habit of gambling.

***

تا هستم بریش تو بستم F. T. As long as I exist, I will cling to your coat-tails (lit. beard). { This is what a hanger-on would say }.

***

تا یار کرا خواهد و میلش بکه باشد F. T. It remains to be seen who will be chosen by the Friend (i. e. God), and to whom He will incline. { This is very much like the E. phrase "The matter is on the knees of the gods" }.

T. The egg-stealer will become a camel-stealer. { From the following anecdote }:

A child once stole an egg and took it home to his mother, who admired his clever act and said, "Well done, my brave son!" When the boy attained his adult age one day he stole a camel for which he was condemned to imprisonment. Before going to prison he requested to be allowed to meet his mother. This was granted, and the young man, on meeting his mother, asked her to stretch out her tongue for him to kiss it. But instead of kissing it, the youth bit it off angrily, and said, "The egg-stealer will become a camel-stealer".

تخم دو زرد میکنند؟ T. Does he lay double-yolked eggs? (i. e. Is he anything special?)

Note. A double-yolked egg is very rare, and hence much esteemed.

تخم لغ در دهن کسی شکستن T. To break an addle egg in some one's mouth (i. e. to inspire a vain hope in his mind by a promise).

تخم مرغش زرده ندارد T. His eggs have no yolks (i. e. He is a very deceitful dealer; he is an impostor).

تخم نکرد روزی هم که کرد در کاهدان T. The hen was not laying, but one day when it did, it laid the egg in the straw-bin. { Said of a person who does not do his duty, and if occasionally he does, he does it in a wrong way }.

تریت نا اهل را چون گردگان بر گنبد است F. T. The effect of education on the intractable is as water on a duck's back ( lit. as walnuts on a dome ).

[سعدی] تربیت یکسان است و طبایع مختلف F. T. Training is always the same, but capacities differ.

Note. طبایع is the pl. of طبیعت "nature".

ترتیزك كاشتم كه قاتق نانم شود قاتل جانم شد F. T. The fungus which I meant for a relish proved fatal to me.

E. E. I have brought up a bird to pick out my own eyes.

[ Adapted from the original pvb. He hath brought up a bird to pick out his own eyes ].

Note. The first part of this pvb. literally means " I sowed cress seeds, intending to eat the cress with my bread ". Note the quasi-rime between قاتق ( anything eaten with bread ) and قاتل fatal; also, a murderer.

ترجیح بلا مرجح محال است T. Distinction without a difference is absurd.

ترحم بر پلنگ نیز دندان ستمکاری بود بر گوسفندان [سعدی]

Note. The pvb. also begins with اگر for توکه

P. T. Have you died (که) ما تابوت حاضر نکردیم ؟ that we should prepare your bier ? { A facetious answer to a complaint of neglect }.

P. T. تو مادر مرده را شیون میاموز [نظامی]
the bereaved how to mourn.

Note. For "bereaved" which originally means داغدیده the P. has مادر مرده i. e. one whose mother is dead.

تو مو می بینی و من پیمچش مو تو ابرو من اشارتهای ابرو [وحشی]
P. T. You see the hair, while I see the waves of the hair; you see the eyebrow, but I the signs of the eyebrow. { Referring to the meanings and expressions read in the face of the beloved, as being worth more than mere, inexpressive beauty }.

تو نباشی یار من خدا بسازد کار من

P. T. Shouldn't you aid me as a friend,

My aid from Heaven God will send.

Note. The idiom: کار کسی را ساختن as used in this pvb.
means "to arrange some one's affairs", but nowadays it has a contrary implication, meaning "to ruin some one ;
do his job; do away with him".

P. T. "Amidst the scuffle", (she says), "pluck my eyebrows". { Used when a person wants a trifling affair to be done by another who

F. T. Sometimes one has to say جا بجا کنعبد "We serve Thee", and sometimes کنستعین "We seek help from Thee", as the case may be.

Notes. (1) In the first Surab (i. e. chapter) of the Koran there is a verse, which reads ایاک نعبد و ایاک نستعین i. e. "We serve Thee, and we seek help from Thee" (addressing God in prayer). The letter ك at the end of ایاک means in Arabic "thee", but this is read so closely with the following words نعبد and نستعین as to make it seem that these words are کنعبد & کنستعین (2) This pvb., which, though based on extracts from the Koran, seems to be vulgar, is used to show that everything is good in its own place, or to indicate the necessity of changing one's acts and words as dictated by the "spur of the moment".

F. T. There is no trace of the baby save the wetting of its bed. { Cited in cases when one finds that something is missing in the very place it should have been while it has left certain traces }.

T. After an attack by highwaymen, a road is safe for forty days. جاده دزد زده تا چهل روز ایمن (یا امن) است

T. Spying is (like) pandering. جاسوسی جا پیچی است

Notes. (1) جا پیچ is a synonym of جاکش "a pimp or panderer". (2) If the attribute here given to spies seems to be exaggerated, we might extend the E. rendering and make it read, "Spying is pandering to others' evil designs".

the scent of the rose?—in the rose-water.

Note. The first hemistich is usually changed to چونکه گل رفت و گلستان شد خراب

چون نجس تر شود نجس تر شود T. The unclean becomes fouler by getting wet. Cf. سگ بدریای هفتگانه etc.

Notes. (1) By “unclean” as used here is meant

“ceremonially unclean according to the Islamic rites”. (2)
What gives a proverbial beauty to the above is the use of the pun on the word تر “wet” which is also the P. suffix for the comparative degree.

چون یار اهل است کار سهل است { اوحدى کازرونى } T. When the party with whom one has to deal is amenable, the affair is easy.

Note. مرده شو (or vulgarly شور مرده) means literally one who washes the dead.

چه علی خواجه چه خواجه علی
E. E. It is six of one and half a dozen of the other. Cf. اوزوم و انگور.

Note. علی Ali is a masculine proper name, and خواجه khajeh is an honorific title for a man of distinction, though it has come to mean also a eunuch. In any case the original meaning of the pvb. is that it makes no difference whether you call a man Khajeh-Ali or Ali-Khajeh.

چه مادری که از دایه مهربان تر نباشد !
F. T. Call her not a mother who is not kinder ( to the child ) than the nurse.

F. T. Be it known to you, since you are plundering all; That there's some money under the saddle (in the hall). {From the following anecdote}:

A number of thieves raided a certain house one night. The owner of the house, seeing that they were carrying away everything, pointed to a pack-saddle under which he had hidden some money, and said to them hopelessly, "Now that you are determined to plunder the whole house, I must tell you that there is also a hundred tomans under the pack-saddle".

Cf. the E. In for a penny, in for a pound.

حالا که هر دو تا خوب با هم ساخته اند که من یکی را از میان بردارند

F. T. Indeed they have agreed with each other in making away with me. {From the following anecdote}:

A certain person fell ill after he had eaten melons and honey together, which, according to popular belief, make the eater sick. One of his friends, who went to visit him, said, "We told you that melons and honey do not agree with you ” . “ Indeed ” , said the sick man , “ they have agreed with each other in making away with me ” .

حالا من ميو F. T. It is now my turn to mew.

{ From the following anecdote } : -

A hungry cat went to a table at which a man was eating , and began to mew in search of food. For every morsel that he ate , the man served another to the cat. But the greedy animal disposed of its morsel quickly , and mewed again , while the man was still chewing his morsel. When this was repeated several times the man rose and took the cat's seat , saying , “ It is now my turn to mew ” .

حالا (هم) نوبت رقاصی من است T. Now it is my turn to dance.

{ From the following anecdote } :

A camel and an ass were livin comfortably together in the country. One day when they had come too near the residential part of the village , the ass began to bray. “ Stop braying , dear friend ” , said the camel , “ lest the inhabitants hear and give us burdens to bear ” . The ass answered , “ I can't forbear from doing it , for this is my usual hour for singing ” . So he went on braying until the villagers , following the noise , came and led both of them into captivity.

The next day they had to cross a deep river , and since it was impossible for the ass to cross it , the villagers put the ass on the camel's back to be carried across. When the camel reached the middle of the river , he began to caper. “ Stop capering at this untimely moment ” , beseeched the ass , “ or I shall be thrown into the river ” . “ Not so ” ; retorted the camel , “ just as it was your turn yesterday to sing in that untimely hour , it is my turn to-day to dance at this untimely moment ” , and he went on capering until the ass fell into the river and was drowned.

F. T. He who is a man must be spoken to once.

حرف را باید هفت دفعه غورت داد F. T. Rather gulp down your words seven times than have to swallow it.

Note. The idioms "to gulp down one's tears or sobs" is commonly used in E., and I found myself obliged to extend it to one's "words" as well, and, incidentally, a similarity arises between "gulp" and "swallow", whereas the latter means to "withdraw (one's statement) as erroneous". At any rate the pvb. recommends a thorough examination of one's words before uttering them, so that one needs not swallow or regret them afterwards.

حرف راست را از بچه پیرس T. Ask the truth from the child.
{ Children, drunkards (See مستی و راستی), and insanes (See the next pvb.) usually speak the truth }.

حرف راست را از دیوانه باید شنید T. The truth must be heard from the madman.

حرف زشت زیر خشت F. T. Obscene talk is better suppressed (or concealed).

Notes. (1) I have heard this phrase only from the Persian Jews, and doubt if it is used by the rest of the Iranian population. (2) خشت is a sun-dried brick, and rimes with زشت "obscene".

حرف شنیدن ادب است F. T. Listening to others' advice is courtesy.

حرف گذشته را نباید زد T. What is past must not be talked over.
E. E. Let bygones be bygones.

حرف مرد یکی است T. A man's word is one (i. e. A man should not change, or go back from, his word).

Note. Sometimes this is changed to حرف مرد يك كلمه است which gives an opportunity to perjurers and turncoats, though in jest, to expand the pvb. and say حرف مرد يك كلمه i. e. What a man says consists of one word; hitherto I used to say, "Yes", but hereafter I shall say, "No".

حرف نشخوار آدميزاد است F. T. Man chats as the ox chews the cud.

حرف هست از شمشير بدتر F. T. There is many a word that strikes deeper than a sword.

E. E. Don't teach your grandmothers to suck eggs.

حکم حاکم مرگ مفاجات T. The governor's order is (like) a sudden death (i. e. it must be executed unfailingly).

حکیم آنست که سر خودش آمده باشد F. T. The best physician is he who has experienced illness.

Notes. (1) حکیم which is a sage has come to mean a physician as well, its modern synonyms being پزشک and طبیب. (2) سرش آمده باشد is colloquial for سرش آمده باشد

حکیم باشی را دراز کنيد T. "Lay down the head-physician." [From the following anecdote]:

A Turkish prince was once affected with colic, and the head-physician in his court prescribed for him an enema. But when the prince was told the manner of applying the enema, he got angry, and asked the doctor, "Whom are you going to have treated in this way?", and the frightened physician immediately said, "Me". The prince then said to his attendants, "Lay down the head-physician and have him injected in the prescribed manner". The story goes that as soon as this was done, the prince was relieved of his pain, and from that time on, whenever he fell ill, no matter what the illness was, he used to order his attendants to "lay down the head-physician".

The phrase حکیم باشی را دراز کنيد has now become proverbial inasmuch as there is usually a certain unfortunate man who is always to blame for anything that happens.

حکیم جوچه خروسش فرموده است T. The doctor has recommended a cockerel for her. [Cited in case when an old woman has married, or wishes to marry, a young husband].

E. E. Physician, heal thyself.

حلال بر عقلا و حرام بر جهال T. Allowed to the wise, but forbidden to the foolish. [Said of wine]. Cf. باده نی درهرسری

آنچنانرا آنچنان تر میکند and شر میکند

حلالش چه وفا دارد که حرامش داشته باشد F. T. What is lawfully gained by a person is hardly expected to be faithful to him; much less what is unlawfully gained by him.

ازحلوا حلوا گفتن Same as حلوا حلوا دهن شیرین نمیشود

حلوای آهک را میتوان پخت اما نمیتوان خورد T. One may make sweetmeat with chalk (lit. lime), but it cannot be eaten (i. e. Severe measures may be planned out, but may not succeed in practice). Cf. توان بخلق etc.

Note. This pvb. seems to be in use among the Jewish population of the country.

حلوای تنتانی تا نخوری ندانی E. E. The proof of the pudding is in the eating.

F. T. Until you eat of the sweetmeat, you will not know (how it tastes).

Note. تنتانی is of obscure meaning, but a shrewd friend of mine believes حلوای تنتانی means "sweetmeat eaten between two (تن)" alluding to sexual intercourse.

E. E. If my aunt had been a man, sh'd have been my uncle.

Note. A commoner pvb. for this idea is اگر خاله... داشت etc., but the one given here is a regular hemistich.

خاله را میخواهند برای درز و دوز اگر نه چه خاله چه یوز F. T. The aunt is wanted to help in needlework (or sewing); otherwise an aunt and a panther are one. {Relatives are expected to help one another}.

Note. The rime between the words دوز and یوز extenuates the exaggerated comparison of "an aunt who does not help in sewing" to a panther.

خاله سوسکه به بچه اش میگوید قربان دست و پای بلوریت بروم

F. T. Lady Beetle, fondling her child, says to her, "I adore your crystalline limbs". Cf. بوزینه بچشم مادرش etc.

Notes. (1) قربانت بروم is a common phrase used by a mother in fondling her child and means literally, "May I be sacrificed to thee". (2) بلوری "crystalline" must, of necessity, imply "whiteness", as the insect in the pvb. is assumed to belong to the family of black beetles.

T. Silence is better than idle talk. خامشی از کلام بیهده به [ناصر خسرو]

خانم رفت عقب دوغ باو ندادند کنیز را فرستاد عقب ماست

F. T. Though they refused milk to the mistress, she sent the maid for cream.

F. T. A single stone is enough to do damage in a house full of glass. خانه پر شیشه را سنگی بس است [زلالی]

Cf. تو را که خانه نشین است etc.

F. T. Do you expect to find copper vessels in a bear's den? خانه خرس و باطیه مس؟

Note. باطیه, which is erroneously changed to بادیه, means "a bowl in which soup is served".

F. T. The bridegroom's house shows signs of wedding, while there خانه داماد عروسی است خانه عروس هیچ خبری نیست is no excitement in the bride's house (i. e. A man may be cocksure that he will marry a certain woman, while the latter has not yet expressed her consent to the marriage. The pvb. is a caution against premature hopes).

Note. The reverse of this pvb. also exists, that is خانه داماد خبری نیست خانه عروس عروسی است or خانه عروس عروسی است خانه داماد خبری نیست

خانه دروغگو آتش گرفت هیچکس باور نکرد T. The liar's house was set on fire, but none would believe it. {From the story of the man who falsely cried "Fire" so often that on one occasion when his house was really on fire, his genuine cry for help was ignored}.

Note. The E. proverbial expression "to cry wolf too often" should be so modified as to be adapted to the P. pvb.

T. To have a crab in one's brain (i. e. to be mad).

E. E. Do not cast pearls before swine.
F. T. The ass will never know the value of sugar and candy.

Note. A variant form of this pvb. is خر چه داند بهای where نقل و نبات means "sugar-plum", but this hemistich has a different rythm from that of the preceding.

F. T. Better to hear the death-rattle of one's mother-in-law than the warbling of the nightingale.

Note. "Mother-in-law", as used here, means "one's wife's mother", and Dehkhoda observes that the saying is not true in the majority of cases, where "the mother of one's wife is one's second mother". Personally, I have noticed that grievances against wives' mothers are more prevalent among the Moslems than among the Jewish population of Iran's population.

F. T. The ass is tired, while the owner is not yet content.

T. The sleeping ass will not get its corn

(lit. barley). Cf. اسب دونه etc.

خر خود را از پل گذراندن T. To cause one's ass to cross the bridge (i. e. to attain one's aim; also, to get over one's difficulties).

خر خود(ت) را بران T. Drive your own ass (i. e. So long as you can attain your aim, don't care about other people's faults). Cf. the preceding proverbial phrase.

خر دادن و خیار استدن T. To exchange one's ass for another's cucumber.

Note. If the E. proverbial expression "to throw a sprat to catch a herring" could be reversed, we should have a near parallel for the above P. phrase.

خر دیزه است مرغ خود را خواهد برای زیان صاحبش F. T. He is that proverbial ass, which, through stubbornness, endangers its own life in order to cause a loss to its owner.

Note. خر دیزه is an ass marked with a stripe extending from the head to the tail.

خر را با آخور میخورد مرده را باغور T. He eats the ass with the manger; the dead with the tomb. { Said of an impious glutton }.

خر را باید جایی بست که صاحب خر راضی باشد An ass must be tied where the master will have him.

Note. A variant form of this pvb. is خر را جایی می بندند که etc.

خر را بزدن اسب نتوان کرد T. The ass cannot be turned into a horse by beating.

Cf. the E. You cannot wash a blackamoor white.

خر را بعروسی می برند که بارش کنند F. T. They take the ass to the wedding only in order to load it.

Note. This pvb. seems to have its origin in the following versified story by Khaghani :

خر کی را بعروسی بردند      خر بخندید و شد از قهقهه سست
گفت من رقص ندانم بسزا      مطربی نیز ندانم بدرست
بهر حمالی خوانند مرا      کاب نیکو کشم و هیزم چست

a free translation of which in prose is as follows:

A little ass, being invited to a wedding, laughed until he became quite weak. He said, "I do not dance well, nor am I a good minstrel; (surely then) they call me for drudgery, for I can draw water well, and am good for carrying fuel."

خر را پیش خر و امیدارند هم رنگ نمیشود همبو میشود
F. T. Asses kept together do not become of the same colour, but assume a common odour.

E. E. (a) Tell me the company you keep, and I will tell you what you are. (b) A man is known by the company he keeps.

Note. "Odour" in this pvb. alludes to character, and hence some would replace همبو by همخو which means "of the same habits, congenial, etc."

خر را سربار میکشد جوانرا ماشاء الله
F. T. An ass is killed by an overload, and a youth by encouraging flattery.

Note. ماشاء الله which originally means "what God has willed" is used as an exclamation to mean, (1) "Well done!"; (2) "May God preserve you from evil eye!"; etc. The idea is that a young man who is about to carry a load may allow to be overloaded if the on-lookers encourage him to do so and admire his strength by saying ماشاء الله. Cf. the E. The last feather broke the camel's back; also "A willing horse is run to death."

خر راضی صاحب خر راضی
F. T. The satisfaction of an ass means that of its owner.

خر را که بعروسی میبرند برای خوشی نیست برای آبکشی است
F. T. The ass which is taken to a wedding is expected to drudge (lit. draw water), not to have a good time. Cf. خردا بعروسی etc.

خر را گم کرده پی نعلش می گردد T. He has lost his ass, and he searches for its shoe. { Referring to one who is looking for the non-essential after he has given away the essential}.
Cf. اسب را گم کردن etc.

Note. Some replace نعل for پالان which means "pack-saddle".

خر رنگ کردن T. To paint an ass (i. e. to take in a fool or to dupe a simpleton).

Note. From the expression خر رنگ کردن comes the adjective کن رنگ which designates showy, but worthless objects.

خر رو بطویله تند میرود F. T. The ass walks fast when going to the stable.

خرس در کوه بوعلی سینا است T. The bear is Avicenna in the mountains.

E. E. (a) In the land of the blind the one-eyed are kings (Scottish). (b) He is a Triton among the minnows. (c) The fool is wise where there is scarcity of wisdom.

خرسندی دوم توانگری است T. Contentment is next to wealth.
Cf. قناعت توانگر کند etc.

E. E. (a) A man is only as rich as he is contented. (b) The contented man is a rich man. (c) To be poor and contented is riches enough.

خر سواری را حساب نمیکند T. He doesn't reckon the ass he is riding. { The following anecdote will show the purpose of this pvb. } :-

Molla-Nassreddin had ten asses. One-day it occurred to him to count them, but since he was riding on one of them at the time, he failed to take notice of that one, and so he counted only nine asses. On getting down from the ass, and counting the asses again, he found them to be ten in number.

خر سواری عیب، از خر زمین خوردن دو عیب F. T. Riding an ass is not much of a credit; so much less falling down from an ass.

Note. عیب means " a fault or defect " .

خر سیصد دینار پالان هفتصد دینار T. An ass worth 300 dinars, and a pack-saddle worth 700 dinars. Cf. the E. pvb. The game is not worth the candle.

Note. سیصد دینار and هفتصد دینار meant formerly 3 tenths and 7 tenths of a Rial respectively, and, according to the new monetary system, they are 3 and 7 Rials respectively.

خرش از پل گذشت T. His ass has now crossed over the bridge. { Though we have assisted him to get over his difficulties, now that he has attained his aim, he is too ungrateful to remember us } .

خرش کن و بارش کن T. Make an ass of him and load him. { By flattering and cajoling a person, you may induce him to do anything for you } .

Note. A variant form of this pvb. is افسار بیار خرش کن i. e. Make him an ass, and furnish him with a bridle. In this case a rime is produced between خرش کن and خرش کن

خر عیسی به آسمان نرود T. The ass of Jesus will not go to Heaven (i. e. It is not relationship with the great that makes one great ) .

خر عیسی گرش بمکه برند چون بیاید هنوز خر باشد [سمدی] T. Though the ass of Jesus is taken to Mecca, on its return it is still an ass.

E. E. An ape is an ape, a varlet's a varlet,

Though he be clad in silk and scarlet.

Note. Pilgrimage to Mecca is considered, according to the Mohammedans, to enhance a person's greatness or holiness.

خر کرایه ای را تا در خانه باید سوار شد T. One should ride a hired horse to the very door of his house (i. e. One should make the best of his money's worth ) .

خر کریم را نعل کردن E. E. To grease the palm of a person (, typically Karim).
T. To shoe Karim's ass.

خر که جو دید گاه نمیخورد T. Once an ass has had ( or seen ) barley , it will not eat straw.

خر که یکبار پایش بچاله رفت دیگر از آن راه نمیروند F. T. Once an ass has fallen into a ditch , it will no longer go the way where the ditch is. [Experience teaches even an ass; so much more a man ] .

خر کی بار کردن T. To load oneself as an ass (i. e. to overeat oneself; to guzzle) .

خر را بعروسی بردند etc. See under بعروسی etc.

خر گچ کش روز جمعه از کوه سنگ می آورد F. T. The ass which carries gypsum is made to carry stones from a quarry on Friday( , which is the weekly rest-day). [Pvb. showing how the weak and defenceless people are treated ] .

خر لخت را پالانش را بر نمیدارند F. T. From a bare ass none can take a pack -saddle. Cf. از کف دست etc.

E. E. ( a ) Where nothing is, nothing can be had. ( b ) 'Tis very hard to shave an egg. ( c ) You can't draw blood out of a stone.

Note. The sentence is grammatically wrong on account of the double direct object: پالانش را and خر لخت را

خر ما از کرگی دم نداشت T. My ass never had a tail from the time it was a foal. [A statement to free oneself from a difficulty or commitment, and meaning, " I have no pretensions whatsoever to begin with]. [From the following story ]:

A man who owed a certain sum to another was once urged by the latter to pay off his debt forthwith, or else go with him to the judge. The debtor agreed to go with him, but on the way it occurred to him to run away, and so he fled into a house, which happened to be open, and climbed the stairs leading to the house-top.

Meanwhile he was being pursued closely by the creditor, who was about to catch him, but he threw himself down to the court-yard, because the roof afforded no outlet to escape. Unfortunately, however, he fell right on the landlord's wife who was lying on the ground, and the woman, who was pregnant, met with an unhappy miscarriage. Her husband, who was present, immediately took the man by the collar, and sued him for damages. The man said, "I am already going to the judge with the creditor; so let all three of us go together".

On the way they saw an ass, which had fallen down under its excessively heavy load, and the owner of which was entreating the passers-by to help him raise the animal on its legs. They decided to help the poor man, and while the other two men were removing the load and the pack-saddle, the debtor tried to raise the ass by its tail, which he held near the root. The first exertion, however, caused the tail to be plucked off, and the owner of the ass started a row and claimed damages.

"Nevermind", said the debtor, "in for a penny in for a pound; since we are going to the judge for other matters, you may join us as well". So they proceeded—all four of them—to the house of the judge, whom the debtor managed to meet first, and to whom he made a sign, which meant a greasing of his palm.

On hearing the several cases the corruptible judge said to the creditor, "The burden of the proof lies with the plaintiff, and hence you have to produce adequate evidence to prove your claim against this man." Now, the creditor was unable to do this, so he was pronounced guilty of a calumny, and adjudged to pay a penalty on that account.

To the second man the judge said, "Since this man has been the cause of your wife's miscarriage, you will have to send your wife to his house, where he would make her pregnant; and, furthermore, you will have to arrange for her alimony for the time she will remain in his house".

No sooner had the judge pronounced this judgment that the owner of the ass betook himself to his heels, saying, "My ass had no tail from a foal".

خرما به بصره بردن T. To carry dates to Basra (h).

E. E. (Same as for بزیرہ بکرمان بردن)

خرما خورده منع خرما نکند T. He who has eaten dates will not (or cannot) forbid eating them. {From the following tradition} :-

Once a woman, whose child was in the habit of eating dates, took him to the Prophet, whom she asked to command the child to abandon the habit. The Prophet told the woman to bring the child in his presence on the morrow, which she did. When on the next day the Prophet's companions asked him the reason for the postponement, he said that on the preceding day he himself had eaten dates, and could not, therefore, forbid the child from eating them.

Note. Sa'di has versified this thought as follows:

رطب خورده منع رطب چون کند

خرما نتوان خورد از این خار که کشتیم [سعدی] T. We cannot eat dates out of the thistles sown by us. Cf. etc. از کندم بروید.

E. E. As a man sows, so shall he reap.

Note. The second hemistich to the above is دنیا نتوان i. e. Silk cloth cannot be woven out of the wool spun by us.

خرم بگل نخواییده (یا نمانده) است T. My ass has not stuck in the mud (i. e. I am not in such a distress as to . . .).

Cf. چه خرم etc.

بر خرمنگس معرکه لعنت See under خرمنگس معرکه

خرمن سوخته را از برق چه هراس ؟ T. He whose stack of wheat is burnt fears not a thunderbolt (i. e. He who has been utterly ruined does not fear anything worse).

خرمن سوخته همه را خرمن سوخته خواهد F. T. He whose stack of wheat has been burnt wishes others to have a like fate.

E. E. A company in distress makes sorrow less.

خر مهره را با دُر برابر ( یا اشتباه ) کردن E. E. To take eggs for money.

T. To compare cowries to pearls ( or to take glass beads for pearls ).

خر میکند میرود پیش خر F. T. An ass will break its halter to join its fellows . Cf. کند همجنس etc.

E. E. Birds of a feather flock together.

خر ناخنکی صاحب سلیقه میشود F. T. The ass which habitually pilfers ( or picks ) happens to be one of good taste.

Note. This may well apply to men, and may, therefore, be allowed to read آدم ناخنکی etc.

خر نیستم که چشمم به آب و علف باشد T. I am not an ass to have an eye to water and grass.

Adapt the F. T. given for خر بر آن آدمی شرف دارد که چو خر دیده بر علف دارد

خر وار نمک است مثقال هم نمک ( است ) F. T. Salt is salt whether a ton or a pound.

Note. ( 1 ) خروار and مثقال are roughly equal to 300 kilogrammes and 5.62 grammes respectively, the former literally meaning an " ass - load " . ( 2 ) This pvb. , though approaching in sense q. v. , is mostly used to mean that one should be grateful to any act of kindness, whether great or small. See نك خوردن etc.

خر و اسب را که یکجا به بندند اگر همبو نشوند همخو میشوند F. T. An ass and a horse tied in the same stable will get the same habits, if not the same odour. Cf. خر دا پیش خر etc.

خر ( وا ) مانده معطل يك مُچشه F. T. An ass which is tired out is too glad to hear " Whoa " .

Note. مُچشه is colloquial for مُچش است and مُچش is the written form of the interjection used for stopping an ass, although it is usually no more than a protracted " sh " sound.

خروس بی محل F. T. A cock which crows untimely (i. e. a person who does a thing in an untimely moment).

خروس را در عزا و در عروسی هر دو سر می بُرند F. T. In both mournings and weddings chickens (lit. cocks) are killed. {The weak and defenceless are oppressed on all occasions and on any pretext}.

خریت ارثی نیست Silliness is not inherited.

خریت بهره خدا داد است F. T. Foolery is a gift from heaven.
E. E. Fools have the best luck.

Note. خریت - a P. word suffixed by an A. ending - originally means "asininity" or "silliness", which is not a suitable word to use in this case.

خری زاد و خری زید و خری مرد T. He was born an ass, he lived as an ass, and died as an ass. {Said of one who has been a fool throughout his lifetime}.

Note. زید (used here in the sense of زیست) is a new verbal form to me, and I think it has been used merely to avoid the spoiling of the rythm of the hemistich. Of course, if the word were pronounced ziad, it would be the third person singular of the verb زیستن but then it would not go with the verbs زاد and مرد which are in the past tense.

خر یکبار پایش بچاله میرود (Same as خربارش یکبار etc.)

خری گو شصت من برگیرد آسان ز شصت و پنج من نبود هراسان
T. An ass which carries easily a load weighing 60 mans, will not care for one weighing 65 mans.

Note. Man, which is an obsolescent unit of weight, is roughly equal to three kilogrammes.

خری که از خری واماند یال و دمش را باید برید
T. An ass which is outstripped by another ass should have its mane and tail cut off. [Quoted in jest for defying one's rival, or for encouraging some one to keep pace with his fellow-men.]

خری که بالای بام بردی باید پائین بیاوری
T. You have to bring down the ass that was carried by yourself to the house-top. [Said to one who has committed a gross act out of rashness, and is considered to be the only one who can remedy it].

Note. خری should be changed to را خری if it is to be strictly grammatical.

خشت اول چون نهد معمار کج تا ثریا میروند دیوار کج
P. T. If the first brick laid by the builder is out of level, the wall will be out of perpendicular even if it goes up as high as the Pleiades. [Stressing the serious effect of a bad foundation or the innovation of a bad custom].

Notes. (1) خشت is a sun-dried brick. (2) معمار is an architect. (3) ثریا is the A. name for پروین 'the Pleiades'.

خشت بر آب زدن T. To mould bricks on water.

E. E. (a) To carry water in a sieve. (b) To throw stones on the sea.

خشتک و تر با هم میسوزند ( Same as ترخشک etc. )

F. T. It is a mistake to point out the mistake of the great.

خطا بود ز خطا زاده گر خطا نکند
F. T. It is a transgression against nature if he who was born of a transgression ( i. e. illegitimately ) does not commit a transgression.

T. How can the sleeping one awaken another who is asleep?

E. E. (a) He that is fallen cannot help him that is down.

(b) The blind cannot lead the blind.

F. T. Men are as they deserve to be.

Notes. (1) خلائق is the pl. of خلیقه which means "creature" or "nature", but has come to mean "human beings". (2) It is the rime between خلائق and لایق which gives the phrase a proverbial shape.

T. Better a beautiful figure than a fine, silk robe.

T. The half-witted man said something and the brainless man believed it.

Note. This is surely a vulgar deviation from the literary variant دیوانه‌ای باور کرد

ابلهی گفت و دیوانه‌ای باور کرد

F. T. One should be secluded from strangers, not from friends. { In poetical language } It is not one's sweetheart, but one's rivals, that should not be allowed to come in).

T. It is a full vat that oozes.

Note. I believe this pvb. is an allusion to the spontaneous effusion of knowledge by a very learned man, or else means that it is the rich man who is expected to give.

T. Sleep is the brother of (i. e. next to) death.

خواب چراغ دزد (Same as دزد چراغ etc.)

T. A sick man's dream is not true.

T. To cause to sleep like a hare (i. e. to calm by false promises; also, to lead by the nose).

Note. خواب خرگوش or خواب خرگوشی "hare's slumber" means profound sleep and, figuratively, neglect.

خواب زن چپ است F. T. Women's dreams go by contraries.

خواب مشت پر کن نیست

F. T. To wish to do is to be able to do.

خوان بزرگان اگرچه لذیذ است خرده انبان خود لذیذتر the table of the rich is full of delicious foods, yet the crumbs in one's own sack is more delicious.

خواهان کسی باش که خواهان تو باشد befriends you. Cf. برای کسی بپر etc.

خواهر شوهر عقرب زیر فرش است a scorpion hidden under a carpet.

Note. "Sister-in-law" in this case means the sister of one's husband.

خواهی نشوی رسوا هم رنگ جماعت شو
E. E. When (you are) in Rome, do as the Romans do.

F. T. If you do not want to be disgraced, suit your actions to those of the masses (of congregation).

خوبرویان گشاده رو باشند تو که رو بسته ای مگر زشتی ؟
F. T. Beauties are unveiled ; why then do you veil yourself if you are not ugly ?

[ سنائی ] خود پذیر است نفس انسانی { سنائی } F. T. Human nature may be trained into acquiring any habit.

خود افتاده نگرید T. He who falls of himself will not cry.
Cf. خود کرده دا etc.

خود بین خدا بین نبود ( یا نشود ) F. T. The self-conceited man cannot discern the truth. (Lit.) He who sees himself cannot see God ( or the truth ). Cf. the next entry.

Note. The versified hemistich in Sa'di, which reads خدا بینی از خویشتن بین مخواه , is much preferred to the prose form given above.

خود پسند خدا پسند نبود F. T. The selfish are not pious.
(Lit.) He who admires himself cannot please God. Cf. the preceding entry.

خود پسندی جان من برهان نادانی بود F. T. Selfishness, my dear fellow, is the proof of ignorance ( or foolishness ).

Note. This is most probably an alteration of خود ستایی
etc. q. v.

خودت را خسته بین رفیقت را مرده F. T. If you find yourself wearied, consider your friend dead. {Said to one who feels weary of another's company }.

خود را بکوجه علی چپ زند E. E. To fence with a question ; also, to ignore a remark.

Note. On the outside of it, this expression would mean to turn to the street ( of one ) called Ali-Chap , where chap means " left " , unless a more reliable source or explanation were found for علی چپ . So much is certain that the word " left " plays an important part in the expression, the idea being that in order to ignore a remark, or fence with a question, one often turns away from the “right” course of conversation.

خود ستائی جان من برهان نادانی بود [حافظ] F. T. Self-praise, my dear fellow, is the proof of ignorance. Cf. خود پسندی etc.

خود فضیحت و دیگران را نصیحت F. T. For oneself vice, and to others advice.

دست دهنده زیر دست نشود T. The hand that gives will not be humiliated ( i. e. Charitable persons will never be inferior to others ).

Note. As a matter of fact the position of the giving hand is always superior to that of the receiving hand, for which reason the Arabs have called the former ید علیا ( the upper hand ), and the latter ید سفلی ( the lower hand ). Therefore, زیر دست ( inferior ), as used in the pvb., can be taken both literally and figuratively.

دست راست را از چپ نشناختن T. Not to know one's right hand from one's left hand.

دست راستش زیر سر ما باشد T. May his right hand be under our head ( i. e. May we have the same good fortune as he ).

Note. (1) The pronouns in this the P. phrase may be changed so as to suit all persons. (2) The phrase is often used as a prayer for the recovery of a sick person. For example دست راست شما زیر سر مریض ما باشد means " May our patient have the same good fortune as you ( i. e. May he recover as you did )".

دست رد بسینه کسی نهادن T. To place the hand of refusal on some one's breast ( i. e. to refuse to grant his request ).

دست زور بالا T. The hand of force ( or the mighty hand ) is up. Cf. the E. Might is right.

دستش کج است E. E. His fingers are lime twigs. T. His hand is crooked.

دست شکسته بکار می‌رود دل شکسته بکار نمی‌رود F. T. A broken arm is more useful than a broken heart.

Note. A variant form of this pvb. is

دست شکسته کار میکند دل شکسته کار نمیکند

دست شکسته و بال گردن است F. T. A broken arm is a nuisance to the neck ( because of the sling ). ( More freely ) The neck bears ( or should bear ) the burden of the broken arm. { This means that we are usually forced to tolerate the behaviour, though undesirable, of our relations, or to assist them financially if they are poor }.

دست فلان خوب است F. T. He has a lucky touch ( i. e. if he is the first one to give you anything on a certain day, it is likely that you will receive more of the same thing from others ).

دست کار دل را نمیکند F. T. The hand cannot do what the heart does ( i. e. Real assistance comes from the heart, or one must do a thing for you willingly ).

Note. This is sometimes expanded to read دست کار دل را نمیکند ولی دل کار دست را میکند the addition being " but the heart can do what is done by the hand ".

دست دکاندار etc. See Note under دست کاسب تلخ است

دستك بزويد كه هر چه بردند بردند F. T. Clap your hands; it is no use to cry over what has been stolen. Cf. حالا كه تالان تالان etc. and the E. pvb. Since the house is on fire, let us warm our feet.

دست ما کوتاه و خرما بر نخيل [حافظ] F. T. The dates are on the palm, and our hands are too short to reach them. { Cited in similar cases }.

دستش نمك ندارد F. T. Nobody is ungrateful to him for his services or kindness.

Notes. ( 1 ) Other pronouns may be used in this phrase so as to make it applicable to all persons. ( 2 ) نمك which نمک شناس means salt, is to be seen in some adjectives, such as نمک خورده "grateful", and in the proverbial phrase نمک خوردن و نمکدان شکستن q. v.

F. T. دست و روش را با آب مرده شو خانه شسته است washed his hands and face with the same water that dead bodies are washed with (i. e. He is very impudent).

Note. مرده شو is a person who is employed to wash the body of the dead before its burial, and مرده شو خانه is the place where this is done.

T. دسته گل (یا دسته گللی) به آب دادن on water (i. e. to spoil an affair so that it gives a much feared result).

{ The following anecdote is either the source of this phrase, or has later been fabricated on its basis } :

"A certain man was notorious for the unlucky or inauspicious influence of his interference in any affair. For example, his arrival in a wedding-party would turn it into a mourning, and he would throw a wet blanket, against his intention, over any meeting in which he appeared.

Such was the evil effect of his presence anywhere that on one occasion when there was a wedding-party in the house of one of his relatives, he was not invited to the party, and the ill-starred man, not wishing to disturb the enjoyment of the guests, remained at home, and contented himself with sending some flowers to the newly-married couple as a present. This he did by tying the flowers into a bouquet and letting it drift down the stream, which ran between his house and that in which the wedding was.

But when the bouquet reached the intended destination, two small children, who were playing about, saw it floating on the water, and each tried to pick it in anticipation of the other. Unfortunately, however, the children, in their struggle to recover the bouquet, both fell into the stream, and were carried away by the torrent, while the guests were making merry. In an hour or so the wedding was changed to a mourning when the dead bodies of the unhappy children were brought home by those who had found them in a neighbouring village. Thereafter it was discovered that the tragic event had been due to the unlucky touch of the man who had tied the bouquet.”

The phrase is usually cited in such form as آخر يك دسته as i. e. In the long run he will spoil the affair, or will involve us in a difficulty.

چودستی Same as دستي را که نمیتوان برید باید بوسید etc.

F. T. After my hand has been cut off, what matters if it is eaten by the dog or by the cat? [ This is applicable to similar cases, for example, stolen goods ].

F. T. No mulct is claimed for a hand that is cut off by the governor ( who himself is the executor of the law ).

Notes. ( 1 ) خون ( blood ) stands for خون تاوان ( blood-money ). ( 2 ) Some substitute ديه—the exact word for mulct—for خون

F. T. Though the enemy is strong, the Guardian (i. e. God ) is stronger.

T. Enemies turn friends while in prison.

T. Enemies are of three categories: the enemy ( proper ), the enemy of one's friend, and the friend of one's enemy.

T. What can one's enemy do when one's Friend (i. e. God ) is kind ?

T. Better a wise enemy than a foolish friend.

Note. The first hemistich to this is دوستی با مردم دانا i. e. It is advisable to make friends with the wise.

دشمن طاووس آمد پر او ای بسا شه را بکشته فر او {موای}

F. T. The peacock's enemy is its feather; many a king has perished because of his pomp and splendour. {Fur animals have the same fate; they are hunted for their fur; so a man's riches may be a cause of his ruin, and even his learning or intelligence, if envied by others}.

E. E. A man's wealth is his enemy.

دعا کن بابات بمیرد و گر نه معلم بسیار است F. T. Pray for the death of your father, for there are many other teachers. {From the anecdote of the teacher who, on hearing a pupil say, "May the teacher die!" gave him this reply, meaning that, if his father remained alive, he would send him to another school.

Note. The variant دعا کن الفبا بمیرد . . . . which means "Pray for the death of the alphabet . . . , is not so very attractive.

دعوا سر لحاف ملا {نصرالدین} بود F. T. The subject of dispute was Molla's quilt. {From the following anecdote}:

One night Molla-Nassreddin, while in bed, heard an uproar outside his house. In his curiosity to see what was going on he wrapped himself up in his quilt and went out to the street, where he found a number of people brawling in their drunken state. But when the crowd saw Molla, they robbed him of his quilt and ran away. Feeling unable to pursue them, Molla came back home, and on being asked by his wife what the cause of the uproar was, said, "The subject of dispute was my quilt, which, when carried away, caused the uproar to quiet down."

Cf. the E. expression "bone of contention".

Note. This proverbial phrase is now often used when a person or his property falls a victim to the plot or sham quarrel of other people.

دَمی پیش دانا به از عالمی است F. T. To the wise an instant is better than Time itself (lit. the world. ) .

دَمی نشاط بعمری برابر است
a lifetime.

دنبه بگرگ سپردن E. E. (a) To set the fox to watch the geese.
(b) To set the goat to watch the cabbage.
T. To entrust the fat (tail) to the wolf.

دندان تیز کردن T. To sharpen (or set) one's teeth (i. e. to covet anything; also, to prepare for revenge).

Note. For the first of the above two meanings دندان طمع تیز کردن would be the clearer expression.

دندان روی جگر گذاشتن F. T. To take one's liver between one's teeth (i. e. to be forbearing under hard circumstances; also, to grin and bear).

دندان طمع را کندن F. T. To extract one's covetous tooth
(i. e. cease to covet, or be greedy for, something).

دندان کسیرا شمردن E. E. To find (or know) the length of one's foot; also, know all about him; also, not pay the least attention to him after having ascertained his inefficiency).

Note. The verb in the phrase under treatment usually occurs in the perfect tense. For example, one would say, دندان های مرا شمرده است "Such a one has counted my teeth; i. e. he knows the length of my foot, or he knows all about me".

دندان لغ را باید کشید T. A loose tooth must be pulled out.

E. E. Better to have it out than be always aching.

Note. A variant form substitutes دندان را که درد میکند "Such a one has counted my teeth; i. e. he knows the length of my foot, or he knows all about me".

دنده را شتر شکست و تاوانش را خر داد F. T. His rib was broken by the camel, while the ass indemnified him for the injury (i. e. One did the damage; another had to pay).

دوست آن باشد که گیرد دست دوست در پریشان حالی و درماندگی [سعدی]

E. E. A friend in need is a friend in deed.

F. T. A friend is he who gives a helping hand to his friend in distress.

دوست آنست که معایب دوست همچو آئینه روبرو گوید
نه که خون شانه با هزار زبان در قفا رفته مو بمو گوید

F. T. A real friend is like a looking-glass, who shows your faults, not like a comb, which, with a thousand tongues, tells them behind your back to a hair.

E. E. (b) There is no better looking-glass than an old friend ( who is frank in telling you your faults ). ( b ) The best mirror is an old friend ( Spannish ).

Notes. ( 1 ) The above is the form in which Deh-khod presents this exquisite stanza, but I have also seen it in the following form:

دوست دارم که دوست عیب مرا همچو آئینه روبرو گوید
نه که چون شانه با هزار زبان پشت سر رفته موبمو گوید to which I give preference on account of the fact that the word دوست in the first hemistich has been used in two ways. (2) It is very difficult to produce an exact rendering of this poetry in English in view of the "poetical congruity" * therein contained, which is based on the words "looking-glass, comb, and hair".

دوست آنست که با تو راست گوید نه آنکه دروغ ترا راست انگارد
F. T. He is your friend who speaks the truth to you (frankly), not who takes your falsehood to be true.

***

دوست آنست که بگریاند دشمن آنست که بخنداند
F. T. A friend brings you to tears, while an enemy causes you to laugh. {Stressing the value of frankness, which a friend is required to possess}. Cf. the preceding entry.

***

دوستان در زندان بکار آیند که بر سفره دشمنان هم دوست نمایند
F. T. Friends prove to be useful (or helpful) in prison; for at table even enemies seem friends. Cf. دوست آن باشد etc.

***

دوستان وفادار بهتر از خویشند {سعدی}
T. Faithful (or constant) friends are better than kinsmen.

Note. The first hemistich to this is مرا بعلت بیگانگی
... . i. e. Drive me not hence because I am a stranger; for ... .". It is the word for (که) which, when standing at the beginning of the second hemistich, makes it regular, and without it the verse would be lame.

***

دوست مرا یاد کند یک هل پوچ
F. T. A friend will remember me even with an empty cardamom. {Meaning that a gift from a friend, however small it may be, is valuable inasmuch as it is a token of friendship}.

Note. I have also frequently heard دوست مرا یاد کند برک کلی wherein برک کل means "rose-leaf".

***

* This is the term used by the late Professor Browne for the figure of speech called in P. مراعات نظیر

F. T. Friends should not take offence at each other's acts.

T. Everybody's friend is nobody's friend.

F. T. It is advisable to make friends with wise men.

Note. The second hemistich to this is دشمن دانا به از نادان دوست, which see on page 208. [ From the versified story by Mowlavi of the man who contracted friendship with a bear. One day when the man was asleep, the bear saw a fly walking on his face. In a desire to drive away the fly from his friend's face, the stupid animal fetched a very large stone and threw it at his face, which resulted in his death ]. Thus, even real friendship, when combined with ignorance, may prove harmful. See خاله خرسه and the E. E. given therefor.

F. T. We are quits on account of our mutual friendship, but you must give barley in exchange for apricots. { Rare pvb. }
E. E. ( Same as for حساب حساب است etc. ) grammes.

دو صد نمیخواهم بیک نمیدهم
F. T. Two-hundred refusals to accept have not the force of one refusal to give.

Note. نمیخواهم and نمیدهم mean "I do not wish" and "I do not give" respectively.

دوغ در خانه (یا دوغ خانه) ترش است
T. The doogh in one's own house is too sour (i. e. One usually despises one's own property). Cf. مرغ همسایه etc.

Note. دوغ is churned sour milk.

دوغ و دوغاب یکیست
T. Churned sour milk and syrup of grapes are the same.

Note. This is usually cited in an interrogative or exclamatory tone and in defiance of those who are void of discernment.

دو غورت و نیمش باقی است
T. Two gulps and a half are still remaining. { Said when a person expresses dissatisfaction or ingratitude for what he has received or eaten }. { From the following traditional anecdote }:

King Solomon once invited all the animals living at his time to a banquet. A monstrous fish or whale, thrusting its head out of the water, asked to be given its portion of the victuals, but the more it was fed, the more it desired to eat, until all that had been prepared for the remaining guests was consumed, and yet the greedy monster would not be filled.

Astonished at the stupendous appetite of the creature, the king inquired as to the amount of the daily food with which it was ordinarily satisfied, to which the monster replied, " My daily food consists of three gulps ( or morsels ), and all I have eaten so far makes half a morsel; I am waiting, therefore, for the remaining two and a half morsels "

F. T. Two men toiled and their effort was lost labour: the first was he who amassed ( wealth ) and enjoyed it not, and the other was he who acquired learning, but practised it not.

Two dogs and a bone,
Do not agree in one.

ده انگشت را خدا برابر خلق نکرده است T. God has not created the ten fingers alike. Cf. پنج انگشت etc.

ده خراب خراج ندارد F. T. A ruined village is not liable to tax. Cf. ازده ویران etc.

ده خوب است برای کدخدا و برادرش T. The village is ( only ) good for the headman of the village and his brother.

Note. A variant, but less common, form of this pvb. درده کراخوش است ؟ رئیس و برادرش را is

ده درویش در گلیمی بخشیند و دو پادشاه در اقلیمی ننگیند [سعدی]

F. T. Ten dervishes may sleep on a single carpet, but two kings cannot reign in the same country.

E. E. Two stars keep not their motion in the same sphere; nor can England brook a double reign of Harry Persy and the Prince of Wales.

Notes. (1) کلیم is a short-napped carpet. (2) خسبیدن is an archaic form of خوابیدن. (3) اقلیم is an A. word of Greek origin meaning "clime or climate". It has also been used in the sense of a "continent" or "region".

T. To beat the kettledrum under the carpet (i. e. to try to conceal what is manifest or notorious).

Cf. آفتاب را بکل etc.

F. T. With the village in sight, you ask, "How far is it?" [An unnecessary question].

F. An open mouth will have its daily portion (i. e. Human beings, who depend on Providence for their daily bread, are sure to have it). Cf.

etc. سرکم روزی

F. T. Better to stop the dog's mouth with a morsel.

E. E. Cast a bone in the devil's teeth, and he will save you.

T. The dog's mouth is always open (i. e. A slanderous person will always slander).

E. E. (a) His mother's milk is scarce out of his nose yet. (b) He smells of mother's milk.

T. His mouth smells of milk.

E. E. He has a loose tongue. (b) He is foul-mouthed.

F. T. His mouth has no fastening.

Note. The word چاک means "a rent or slit", and has been used in the adjective بی چاکِ دهن which means “foul-mouthed”. However, to say that one’s mouth has no fastening is more reasonable than to say it has no slit.

دهن مردم را نمیتوان بست See under در دروازه etc.

دهنه جیبش را تار عنكبوت گرفته است T. The opening of his pocket has been covered up by spider’s web (i. e. He is empty-handed).

دیا بروم بردن T. To carry fine silk (or brocade) to Rome (or Byzantine).

E. E. (Same as for بزیر بکرمان بردن).

دیا نتوان خورد See under خرما نتوان خورد etc.

دیدار یار ناسا متناسب جهنم است F. T. To meet an uncongenial acquaintance is a hell.

دیدبانی مجو ز دیده کور [مکتبی] F. T. Do not expect a blind man to act as watchman.

دیده اهل طمع به نعمت دنیا پر نشود همچنانکه چاه به شبنم [سعدی] F. T. The worldly desires of the greedy man can never be fulfilled, any more than a well can be filled with dew.

دیدنی بادی روزی F. T. If you see me steal it, I shall say, “It was for a joke”, but if you don’t, what I take will be a Godsend.

Note. A variant form of this pvb. is دیدنی شوخی دیدنی جدی where جدی means “(in) earnest”.

دیر آشنا و زود رنج F. T. Slow to become sociable, and quick to take offence.

دیر آی و درست آی F. T. Come late, if you want, but be sure to come.

E. E. (a) Better late than never. (b) Make haste slowly.

دیر آی و شیر آی F. T. Come late, if you want, but come as a lion (i. e. without fail).

Notes. (1) The P. phrase is susceptible of grammatical changes; for example, we may say دیر آمد و شیر آمد i. e. Such a one came late, etc. (2) It is chiefly for riming purposes that the word شیر has been used here; otherwise, to express the idea of "coming without fail" by the use of the word "lion" does not seem to me very suitable.

دی رفت و پری رفته و روز امروز است F. T. Yesterday and the day before yesterday are gone; the true day, therefore, is to-day.

دیزی از کار در آمده F. T. A pot which has been tried in cooking.

Note. دیزی is a small earthen pot in which broth and the like are cooked, and, since those who use such pots tell us that the new ones are not suitable for cooking purposes, the phrase has come to mean metaphorically, though jocularly, a fully-matured woman, who has proved after some years to be a good wife.

دیشب همه شب کمچه زدی کوحلوا؟ F. T. You have been applying the ladle all night, but where is the halva? (i. e. sweetmeat)
See the explanation given for آتقدر چریدی etc.

دیگ بدیگ میگوید رویت سیاه E. E. (a) The pot calls the kettle black. (b) Said the kettle to the pan,

"Stand aside, black man".

T. A pot says to another pot, "Your face is black".

Note. رویت سیاه means also "Shame on you!"

دیگران کاشتند ما خوردیم ما میکاریم دیگران بخورند E. E. He who plants a walnut tree expects not to eat of the fruit.

F. T. Others planted the tree, and we ate of its fruit; it is now our turn to plant it, so that others may eat of its fruit. [From the following anecdote]:

A certain king once passed by a very old man who was planting a young walnut tree. Being told by the king that his effort was a lost labour because the tree would not bear fruit in less than thirty years' time, the old man said, "Others planted, etc., etc."

Note. This quotation is used as a counsel to encourage people to care for the future generation.

دیگ سیه جامه سیه میکند E. E. He that handles pitch will be defiled.

T. A black pot blackens one's clothes.

دیگ شراکت جوش نمی آید A joint pot does not boil.

Note. The E. phrase is an Irish pvb., which, by coincidence, has the same wording as the P. phrase. There is also in E. "He who takes a partner takes a master", which does not convey exactly the same idea.

دیگی که برای من نجوشد سر سگ توش بجوشد F. T. As long as the pot does not boil for me, let it boil a dog's head.
Cf. دنیا پس مرگ ما etc.

دیگی که زانید سر زاهم میرود F. T. A pot which gives birth to children can also die in labour. [From the following anecdote]:-

Molla-Nassreddin once got a pot on loan from one of his neighbours, and returned it the next day together with a small pot which he had hidden inside it. On discovering the small pot, the neighbour asked Molla the reason for sending it. "This is the child of which your pot has been delivered last night", replied Molla.

On another occasion when Molla-Nassreddin borrowed the same pot, far from being prompt to return it, he went to his neighbour after some days, and said, "Your pot is dead." "How can a pot die?" asked Molla's neighbour in surprise. "A pot which can give birth to a child can also die in labour", was the smart reply.

Note. Nowadays when a property which has been given on loan is not returned, we often say سر زارفت i. e. "It died in labour".

{سعی} F. T. Those who sell their faith for mammon are silly (lit. asses); they are selling Joseph in an uncertainty as to what they will buy instead.

Note. The pun used in this terse saying is based on the word خرند which has been used in two senses: (1) "they are asses", and (2) they (will) buy".

E. E. (a) Walls have ears. (b) Little pitchers have long ears. (c) The fields have eyes and the hedges ears.

T. The wall has mice, and the mice have ears.

T. May no one's wall be low.

E. E. A low hedge is easily leaped over (or Where the hedge is low, commonly men leap over).

Note. دیوار کوتاه means metaphorically a person who is either weak, or whose meekness is taken for weakness, and who is wronged for that matter. The phrase دیواری از دیدن He has not found a weaker person (or an easier proposition) than me" is very much used.

T. A demon trained by experience is better than an inexperienced man. Cf. ددا آزموده etc.

T. The Devil is not pleased about God.

Note. دیو which is commonly known to be a demon, has also been used as a P. rendering for شیطان or ابلیس which means 'Satan', or the Devil.

F. T. Appear weak-minded, so that others will shoulder your burdens.

Notes. (1) غم کسیرا خوردن usually means to care for some one, or to sympathize with him. (2) A variant form of this pvb. replaces دیگران by عاقلان i. e. "the wise".

T. Be gone, madman, for the drunken man has come. {The drunken man is considered more dangerous than the madman}.

دیوانه بکار خویشان هشیار است F. T. Even the madman is sensible about his own affairs.

دیوانه چو دیوانه به بیند خوش آید T. One madman is pleased to see another.

دیوانه همان به که بود اندر بند F. T. A madman is always better chained.

دیو خوشروی به از حور گره پیشانی [سعدی] T. Better a demon with a cheerful face than a scowling fairy.

Notes. (1) A variant form gives خوشخوی i. e. "good-natured" for خوشروی. (2) گره پیشانی literally means "knitting (or having knitted) one's brow."

ذ

ذات نایافته از هستی بخش کی تواند که شود هستی بخش [ جامی ]

F. T. What has not partaken of existence can never impart existence to other things.

Note. There is a sort of pun on the word بخش which in the first hemistich, means "share or part", and in the second hemistich is a contraction of بخشنده used as part of the compound adjective هستی بخش 'capable of imparting existence'.

ذرع نکرده پاره نکن E. E. Look before you leap.

F. T. Do not cut the cloth before you have measured it.

Note. ذرع which is about 41 inches has now been replaced by متر metr, 'metre', which is about 40 inches, and ذرع کردن means to measure by the zar'.

ذره ذره پشم قالی میشود E. E. (a) Many a pickle makes a mickle. (b) Drop by drop fills the tub. (c) Drop by drop the lake is drained. (d) Feather by feather the goose is plucked. Cf. اندک اندک etc.

Note. The second hemistich to this is ذره ذره خانه خالی میشود i. e. Little by little the house becomes empty.

ذکر عیش نصف عیش است F. T. Mentioning a pleasure is half the enjoyment.

ذکر کدورت کدورت آورد F. T. Mentioning a past indignation creates a new one.

ذوفن بر ذوفنون غالب است F. T. The master of one art prevails over the master of arts.

E. E. Jack of all trades, and master of none.

Note. The contemporary poet, Irāj, has versified this as follows:

چون نیک کم از بد فزون به      ذو فن بجهان ز ذوفنون به

i. e. Since little and good is better than much and bad, the master of one art is better off than the master of arts.

راحت محض میسر نشود نیست صافی که مکدر نشود [ ابرج ]
T. Perfect ease is impossible; nothing so pure that it does not become sullied.
E. E. No joy without alloy.

راز خود با یار خود چندانکه بتوانی مگو
F. T. As far as possible do not tell your secret to your friend.
Note. In a passage of Golestan, the famous book of Sa'di, the reason given for this is that one's friend may turn an enemy.

راز مردم فاش کردن بدترین عیبها است
T. It is the worst of faults to divulge the secrets of others.

راستی از تو مدد از کردگار
F. T. Truth on your part and help on God's.

Cf. النجات فی الصدق

راستی که بدروغ ماند مگوی
T. Tell not a truth which resembles a lie.

E. E. Avoid the appearance of evil.

راستی موجب رضای خدا است کس ندیدم که گمشداز ره راست [ سعدی ]
F. T. Truth wins the approval of God; I have never seen a man lost who followed the straight way.

Note. The beauty of the P. lies in the use of راست "straight" or "honest" and of راستی derived from same, which means "straightness" or "honesty".

T. To carry a grasshopper's leg to King Solomon (یا نزد سلیمان) بردن

E. E. ( Same as for بردن بکرمان ).

T. The narrator ( of the tradition ) is a Sunnite. راوی سنی است

Note. Since the Shiites do not rely on the Sunnites insofar as the narration of the Prophet's traditions are concerned, the phrase, which is assumed do have been said by a Shiite, means, " You cannot rely on the truth of such and such a rumour "

T. The road is narrow, the night is dark, and the destination is far. راه باریک است و شب تاریک و منزل بس دراز

T. The road is entrusted to the road-guard. راه بر اهدار سپرده است better than a sharp sword.

رب النوع روزی کور است T. The god of daily food ( for creatures ) is blind.

Note. The contemporary poet, Iraj, in his verse بیونان این مثل مشهور باشد که رب النوع روزی کور باشد says that this is a common pvb. among the Greeks.

رحم آوردن بر بدان ستم است بر نیکان [سعدی] F. T. To have mercy on the bad means to be unjust to the good.

E. E. ( a ) He hurts the good who spares the bad. ( b ) A favour ill placed is a great waste.

Cf. ترحم بر بلیغک تیز دندان etc.

Note. A variant form gives رحم کردن for رحم آوردن

رحمت به کفن دزد اولی F. T. May the first shroud-snatcher be blessed. { From the following anecdote }:-

The inhabitants of a certain locality complained to the local governor that an unknown person was in the habit of opening the graves of the newly-buried dead people and rob them of their shrouds. The governor managed to find the criminal, who was severely punished for the act.

Soon after another man in the locality followed in the footsteps of the old criminal. But this man was so mean that, in addition to the robbery, he practised disgraceful acts on the dead bodies, the traces of which could be seen by the public. The inhabitants, preferring naturally what the first man had been doing with the dead, would say, whenever they remembered his act, "May the first shroud-snatcher be blessed".

Notes. ( 1 ) The pvb. is cited when after a bad fate one meets with a worse one. ( 2 ) Some people say, صد رحمت به کفن دزد اولی i. e. A hundred blessings to the first shroud-snatcher.

رحم خوب است ولو در دل کافر باشد T. Compassion is laudable even on the part of an unbeliever.

Note. A common variant replaces ولو by اگر which means " if ".

T. One cannot wash the clothes of two sisters-in-law in the same tub. { They are usually each other's rivals or enemies }.

Note. Here "sister-in-law" means the wife of the brother of one's husband.

F. T. It is Rakhsb which Rostam needs to mount on. Cf. دوصد من etc.

Note. Rostam is the name of the famous hero of Shahnameh, the epic poetry and legendary history of Iran by Ferdowsi, and Rakhsb is the name of the hero's horse.

F. T. The Creator will (or may) accept what His creatures reject.

T. Rejection by an enemy is acceptance by a friend.

رزق هر چند بیگمان برسد شرط عقل است جستن اذرها [سعدی]

سَفْرِهَاشِ هَمِيْشِه پَهْنِ اسْتِ F. T. His table is always spread (i. e. He is in the habit of telling out his private secrets to others so as to air his grievance ).

سفره نینداخته (یا نیفتاده) بوی مشک میدهد
F. T. A table not yet laid raises hopes of a feast (lit. smells like musk ).

Note. سفره is properly a table-cloth, and the verb which goes with it is بهن کردن or انداختن . By extension, however, سفره means the food served on the table.

سفره نینداخته يك عيب دارد سفره انداخته هزار عيب
T. An unlaid table has one fault, but after it has been laid, it has a thousand faults. [ The one fault of the unlaid table is that it keeps guests in expectation, and the one-thousand faults are the deficiencies of the table that may be discovered, and objected to, by the guests]. See the preceding pvb. and the Note appended thereto.

سفید سفید (ش) صد تومان سرخ و سفید سیصد تومان
حالا که رسید به سبزه هرچه بگویی می ارزه

F. T. Fair or blonde is fair enough;

But peach-coloured I more apprise.

However, it is the dark skin

Which after all wins the prize.

Notes. (1) "Blonde" has been roughly used here for سفید "white"; "peach-coloured" is supposed to mean "red and white"; and سبزه has been rendered "dark-skinned", which a great many people believe is most attractive. (2) The words می ارزد and بگویی and بکی are vulgar forms of می ارزد and بگویی and بکی respectively; so the last part of the saying means, "Whatever price you put on the dark skin, it is worth it." (3) The values, which have been fixed in terms of tomans—now obsolete—could freely be changed to those based on the E. sterling. (4) The verb "to apprise" is archaic, and means "to appraise or appreciate".

سکوت موجب رضا است
F. T. Silence gives consent.

سکونی بدست آری بی ثبات که بر سنگ غلطان نرود نبات [سعدی]

F. T. Find you some stability, for vegetable will not grow on a rolling stone.

E. E. A rolling stone gathers no moss.

سگ شاه ولایت هرجا رود پس آید E. E. It (or he) comes back like a bad penny.

Note. (1) شاه ولایت is a title of Ali, Mohammed's successor, meaning properly "the King (or Prince) of Successorship", and سگ شاه ولایت i. e. a coin belonging to such a great man, or to the period of his caliphate, must not be compared to a bad penny. It must, of necessity, be one of those coins bearing the stamp شاه ولایت which are minted on various occasions, such as the New Year, and given as gifts. Therefore, it is not to be explained as a "bad coin", but as one which has no monetary currency. (2) The pvb. is cited when a man without capabilities or merits is turned back from any place where he is posted as an employee.

سگ از مردم مردم آزار به [سندی] F. T. A dog is better than a man-tormenting human. Cf. سگ بر آن آدمی etc.

T. A grateful dog is better than an ungrateful man.

F. T. Better be the dog of the house than the meanest member. Cf. the E. Better be the head of a dog than the tail of a lion.

Notes. (1) Some say باش and مباش for بشو and نشو respectively. (2) A variant form of this pvb. is سگ باش کوچک خانه مباش

F. T. Feed your dog with blood, and it will become blood-thirsty. Cf. چو کر به نوازی etc.
E. E. If you save a rogue from the gallows, he will rob you that same night.

Note. The P. pvb. is taken from the following verse:
سگی را خون دل دادم که با من آشنا گردد

ندانستم که سگ خون میخورد خونخوار میگردد

i. e. I fed a dog with the blood from my own heart, in the hope that it will become sociable with me, little knowing that when a dog drinks blood it becomes bloodthirsty.

سگ دادن و سگ توله گرفتن F. T. To take a pup in exchange for a hound (lit. dog).

Note. The E. expression "to throw a sprat to catch a herring (or whale)" has a contrary meaning.

سگ داند و پینه دوز در انبان چیست T. The dog and the cobbler (only) know what is in the sheepskin. { Referring to a secret known by two persons in common, and kept hidden from others }. { From the anecdote of the cobbler who, in an attempt to get rid of a dog which was annoying him, put his iron mallet in a tool bag made of sheepskin, and hit the bag on the dog's head. The animal died after a few minutes to the surprise of those who only saw the bag, but not the mallet inside it. A knowledge of such content was, therefore, possessed by the cobbler and the dog }.

Note. A variant gives کفشگر "shoemaker" for پینه دوز "cobbler".

سگ در حضور به از برادر دور T. A dog which is present is better than a brother who is away.

Cf. آن خویش منست etc.

سگ در خانه اش تازی میشود F. T. A dog will become a greyhound in this man's house { i. e. He is so stingy that does not properly feed his dog until it becomes as lean as a greyhound }.

Cf. تازی داکه etc.

E. E. One is as bad as the other.
Cf. It is six of one and half a dozen of the other.
T. The yellow dog is the jackal's brother.
Cf. نه قم بماند etc.

E. E. ( a ) There is honour among thieves.
( b ) One crow will not peck out another crow's eyes. ( c )
Dog does not eat dog { which is also the lit. translation }.
Note. Another form of this pvb. is سگ سگ را نمیخورد
i. e. Dog eats dog, but will not discard its bones.

E. T. Feed a dog to satiety, and you will make it unruly. Cf. چو کر به نوازی etc.
E. E. If you save a rogue from the gallows, he will rob you that same night.

F. T. The dog being full, the dish is sour.
E. E. Hunger is the best sauce. Cf. Foxes, when they cannot reach the grapes, say they are not ripe.
Note. قلیه "ghalyeh" is a dish like fricassee.

T. A dog will not recognize its owner
( i. e. The place is so crowded that even a dog . . . ).

F. T. However fat the dog, they would no put it in a pie ( lit. preserve it for food ).
Notes. ( 1 ) قرمه , which is derived from the Turkish word قاورمه , may be rendered preserved meat, potted meat, corned beef, pemmican, and the like. ( 2 ) A common variant of this pvb. is سگ هر چه چاق باشد لای بلونمی گذارند the last part part of which means " they will not cook it in, or serve it with, pilau".

F. T. What! a mangy dog and a golden سگ ناز(ی) آباد است نه غریبه میشناسد نه آشنا T. He is like the dog of Naz(i)abad, which attacks both strangers and acquaintances. {Said of ungrateful and impudent persons}.

سگ و دربان چو یافتند غریب این گریبان بگیرد آن دامن [سعدی] F. T. When a dog and a gatekeeper meet a stranger, the former bites at his skirt, and the latter takes him by the collar.

سگی بیامی جسته گردش بما نشسته F. T. The dust raised by a dog leaping on a roof has settled on us. {The word "بما", "on us", as used by those who cite this pvb., means by allusion "on him", and the pvb. refers to one who claims to be of a noble descent, although he has a very remote relationship with the nobility}.

سگی را خون دل دادم که با من آشنا گردد
ندا نستم که سگ خون میخورد خونخوار میگردد
See Note under سگ خون میخورد etc.

سلام روستائی بی طمع نیست The peasant who greets you "has an axe to grind".

Notes. (1) The part of the E. translation which is between inverted commas is the E. E. of the pvb., for the phrase "He has an axe to grind" is very common in E.

(2) In popular usage the word روستانی is replaced by لر "a native of Lorestan". See the first pub. on page 35.

سَلِقْ شَلِقْ (است) See Note under the next entry.

سَلِقْ شَلِقْ (است) E. E. (a) There is no disputing about tastes. (b) Every man to his taste.

T. Tastes are different.

Note. A jocular variant of this saying is سَلِقْ شَلِقْ. Here سَلِقْ (sologh) is a spurious Arabic plural of سَلِقْ, and has been coined to rime with شَلِقْ (shologh), which means "crowded or confused".

سَنَکِ آشنَا سَه چَارَکِ اسْت F. T. The pound of an acquaintance is only 12 ounces (i. e. The shopman who knows you gives you underweight). Cf. چَارَکِ آشنَا etc.

Note. سَنَکِ, which literally means "stone", here stands allusively for سَنَکِ یَکَمَن "a one-man weight". One man, which is roughly equal to 3 kilogrammes, consisted of four چَارَکِ (quarters). See page 133.

سَنَکِ بَدَرِ بَسْتَه مِیخُورَد F. T. It is the closed door which is hit by, or receives, the stone (i. e. It is he who is doomed to be unfortunate who usually meets with misfortunes or calamities).

سَنَکِ بَدِ گُوهَرِ اَگَر کَاسَه زَرِّیْنِ شَکَنَد

F. T. If a worthless stone breaks a golden bowl, the stone is none the more valuable, nor is the gold depreciated.

سَنَکِ بَزْرَگِ (بَرَدَاشْتَن) نِشَانَه نَزْدَن اسْت F. T. Threatening with a (very) large stone, one does not mean to throw it (i. e. High-flown intentions are not usually feasible, and exaggerated threats or promises are not made in earnest).

سَنَکِ دَر جَايِ خُود(ش) سَنَگِیْن اسْت F. T. A stone is heavy when in place. { Those who move about very much or commit frivolous acts are not worthy of respect }.

Note. The word سنگین “heavy” is derived from سنگ “stone”, and hence the latter word usually implies heaviness. The beauty of the P. may perhaps be partly preserved by saying in E. “A stone weight is weighty when not in motion”.

سنگ در دکان کاسب باشد به از آدم بیکاره است F. T. A stone in a tradesman’s shop is more welcome than an idle person. { Tradesmen usually do not like idle people to sit at their shops and watch their dealings }.

سنگ روی یخ کردن E. E. To play off; also, to make a cat’s paw of.

F. T. To cause to roll like a stone on ice.

سنگ سنگ شکن E. E. Diamond cut diamond.

T. A stone breaking another stone.

سنگ کسیرا سینه زدن E. E. To strike a blow for some one.

T. To smite one’s breast with a stone on another’s behalf.

سنگ کوچک سر بزرگ را می شکند T. A small stone will break a large head. { Cited in similar cases }.

سنگ مفت (و) میوه مفت T. The stone and the fruit can be obtained both free of cost. { Referring to means and ends which are obtainable free of cost—the stone being considered here as the means of throwing fruits off a tree }.

Note. A variant form replaces میوه “fruit” by کلاغ “crows”.

سنگ و آبگینه T. Stone and glass. { Proverbial for two things which are incompatible, or which cannot go together; two contrarieties }.

Note. سنگ و سبوی i. e. “Stone and pitcher” have also been proverbially used to express the same idea.

سنگ و آبینه See Note under سنگ و سبو

سنگی را که دیوانه‌ای در چاه بیندازد صد عاقل نمی‌توانند در آورند

T. A stone thrown by a fool (or madman) into a well, cannot be fished out by a hundred wise men. { It is often next to impossible for wise men to make good the damages caused by fools }.

سُنی که روز حشر شفیعش عمر بود (کور)ی دگر عصاکش کور دگر بود

F. T. A Sunnite whose intercessor is Omar on the Resurrection Day is like a blindman led by another.

Note. The Sunnites believe in Omar the second successor of Mohammed, while the Shiites believe that Ali was the true successor of the Prophet.

سواره از پیاده خبر ندارد F. T. The man on the horseback does not understand the pedestrian. Cf. سیرازگرسته etc.

سؤال از آسمان و جواب از ریسمان F. T. The question is about the sky, and the answer deals with a rope. (Freely) The question is about chalk; the answer is about cheese.

Note. The expression commoly used is آسان و ریسمان (q. v.), the E. E. of which is "chalk and cheese".

سوائی ندارند جیبشان دو تا است E. E. All one, but their meat must go two ways.

F. T. They are one save in respect of their pockets.

سودا برضا خویش بخوشی T. Better burnt than raw.

سودا برضا خویش بخوشی F. T. Trade should be carried on by mutual consent, and kinship should be based on cheerfulness.

Note. This pvb. occurs also in its inverted form خویشی بخوشی سودا برضا سودای خام پختن E. E. To build castles in the air.

Note. The P. سودا means "transaction", and the A. سودا (or rather سوداء) has several meanings, one of which is "melancholy".

سودا چنان خوش است که یکجا کند کسی F. T. It is best to venture an all-out transaction.

سوداگر پنیر در شیشه میخورد E. E. (a.) Bread and point (or potatoes and point). (b) The miser would skin a flint.

F. T. The miserly trader eats cheese from the outside of a glass bottle (i. e. he rubs his bread on the outside of a bottle containing the cheese).

سودای نقد بوی مشک میدهد F. T. Cash transactions are as pleasant as the odour of musk.

سود نابرده (یا سود ناکرده) در جهان بسیار است F. T. There are many in the world who have made no profit in their business.

سوراخ دعا را گم کردن E. E. To get hold of the wrong end of the stick. {From the following anecdote by Mowlavi}:

A man was once reciting, after having eased nature in the water-closet, the following prayer, "O Lord, cause me to smell of the odour of Paradise—prayer recited when smelling flowers—whereas he was to recite that reserved for the occasion of washing oneself after easing nature, which runs as follows, "O Lord, cause me to rank among those who repent, and those who are pure".

Another man, who heard him recite the prayer connected with smelling flowers, said to him, "The prayer was a good one, but you have lost the prayer-hole", meaning thereby that he was mistaking the lower hole, or the a-s, for the upper ones, i. e. the nostrils.

سوراخ کج میخ کج میخواید F. T. A crooked nail for a crooked hole.

سورهیچکس ماتم نمیشود T. No one's feast will turn a mourning.
E. E. It will not make the sky fall.

E. E. One nail drives another. [سوزنی باید کز پای در آرد خاری {سدی}]

F. T. A pin (lit. needle) is needed to bring out a thorn from one's foot.

سوسک به بچه اش میگوید قربان دست و پای بلوریت (بروم)
F. T. The black beetle says to her young one, "How nice and white (lit. crystalline) your limbs are! Cf. هرکسیرا عقل خود etc.

E. E. The owl thinks all her young ones beauties.

سه چیز است که اگر حقیر باشد آنرا استحقار نشاید کرد بیماری و وام
F. T. Three things should not be underestimated, however trifling they may seem: illness, debt, and enemy.

E. E. Though thy enemy seem a mouse, yet watch him like a lion.

سه چیز بی سه چیز پایدارنماند: مال بی تجارت، علم بی بحث، ملک
F. T. There are three things which will not last long, unless combined with three other things: capital without trade, learning without repeated discussion, and the State without strict administration of justice.

Notes. (1) بحث may also be rendered controversy (مباحثه). (2) سیاست also means punishment, which is the result of administration of justice. In modern usage, however, سیاست means politics or policy.

T. Punishment should be proportionate to the crime. سیاست بقدر جنایت است

F. T. An apple takes its colour from its fellow-apple, and a neighbour takes counsel from his fellow-neighbour. Cf. آلوده آلود etc.

E. E. A man is known by the company he keeps.

F. T. Should not a disabled hand hold a red apple (i. e. Should good things be denied to an imperfect person)?

Notes. ( 1 ) It is implied from the way this pvb. is worded that it was originally meant to be a declaration, rather than an interrogation, in which case the originator believed that a crippled hand is not worthy of a red apple. ( 2 ) The pvb. is now cited usually by a person who is not allowed a good thing, whether he believes he merits it or not.

شبخیز باش تا کامروا باشی (Same as سحر خیز باش etc.)

شب سمور گذشت و لب تنور گذشت F. T. The king, warmed by sables, and the beggar, warmed by the baker's oven, both passed the night. [From a versified story, which may be summarized as follows]:

During the reign of Soltan-Mahmood, a king of the Ghaznavi Dynasty, one winter night a homeless beggar passed the night by the side of a baker's oven, which he had chosen for warming himself. In the neighbourhood lay the royal palace, where the king and his courtiers were passing the night in revelry, warmed by sables and other winter clothes. When morning came, the beggar cried out, "O king, you were warmed by sables, and I was warmed by the baker's oven, but we have both passed the night".

شب عید گدائی است F. T. Christmas eve brings poverty. [Said by people who cannot afford the heavy expenses necessitated by the occasion].

Note. شب عید properly means the eve of the Nowrooz, which is the Iranian New Year.

شب غریبان دراز است F. T. A (poor) man passing the night in a foreign country finds the night too long.

شب شراب نیرزد به بامداد خمار F. T. The night's carousal is not worth next morning's hangover.

شب گربه سمور مینماید T. At night the cat looks like a sable.

E. E. When the candle is away, all cats are grey.

Note. Although the above E. has been usually accepted as an equivalent of the P. pvb., common usage makes this pvb. approach the sense conveyed by the E. phrase "To buy a pig in a poke".

شتر بار میبرد و خار میخورد T. The camel carries loads and eats thorns. [Referring to people who, by their stoic nature, live on scanty means and yet suffer the hardships of life.]

شتر در خواب بیند پنبه دانه گهی لب لب خورد گه دانه دانه F. T. The camel dreams of eating cotton-seeds sometimes greedily and sometimes one by one.

E. E. (a) The cat dreams of mice. (b) A lover dreams of his mistress.

شتر دیدی؟ نه F. T. Say that you did not see the camel, and relieve yourself of all commitments. (Lit.) "Did you see a camel?" "No". (See the following anecdote and the Notes appended thereto).

A wise man, popularly identified with the famous poet Sa'di, was crossing the desert. On seeing the footprints of a camel, he knew that a camel had been passing before him. Further on, when he came to a lucern-field, he noticed that only one side of the field had been grazed, and guessed that the camel must have been blind in one eye. In the vicinity also he saw the trace of a camel's kneeling-place, as well as the footprints of a woman, which made him think that the rider, who had been a woman, must have caused the camel to kneel in that spot for a rest.*

*The anecdote has been, and is capable of being, expanded by other details dealing with traces and conjectures, which contribute nothing subservient to the purpose.

At this juncture a man came up to Sa'di, and asked him whether he had seen a camel in the neighbourhood. Sa'di furnished the interrogator with all the foregoing signs and details, whereupon the man, who seemed to be the camel's owner, began to beat the innocent poet, who he thought had stolen the beast and kept the woman. In this way Sa'di committed himself by using his perspicacity, whereas if, in reply to the man who asked him whether he had seen the camel, he had only said, "No", he would have been relieved of such a commitment.

Notes. (1) The pvb. is a warning against giving unnecessary or pedantic answers which involve one in difficulties, and goes as far as to recommend the ignoring of certain facts, even if one has witnessed them. (2) A variant form of this pvb. is شتر دیدی ندیدی i. e. "(Even if) you have seen the camel, (say) you did not see it". Accordingly, the pvb. is also used as a request for waiving a claim, or forgiving a fault. (3) The reason that the anecdote is connected with Sa'di is based on the following verse:

سعدیا چند خوری چوب شتر بانان را میتوان گفت ز اول که شتر دیدی نه
i. e. How long dost thou allow to be beaten by the camel-drivers, O Sa'di? Thou couldst have ignored the matter from the beginning, and said, "No", in reply to the question, "Have you seen a camel?"

It would seem as if Sa'di had personally experienced the trouble described in the anecdote, but the verse in question seems altogether spurious, and must have been invented by the vulgar to justify the belief that it was Sa'di who originated the pvb. At any rate the story is very old.

شتر را با کمچه آب دادن T. To give a drink to a camel with a ladle. (Freely) To feed an elephant with a handful of grass.

شتر را گم کرده پی افسارش میگردد T. He has lost his camel, and he looks for its bridle. See also خر را کم کرده etc.

شتر مرغ است نه می پرد نه بار می برد
F. T. He is like the ostrich, which neither flies nor carries burdens. See بشتر مرغ گفتند etc. and the Note appended thereto.

شتر نقاره خانه است - چشم و گوشش از این صداها پراس است
F. T. He is like the camel which bears the kettledrums; he has too often heard these sounds to be frightened by them. { From a versified story by Mowlavi, which runs as follows }:

A peasant child was beating a small drum in a field in order to keep birds away. It happened that a king was passing by, and one of the camels, which followed the royal retinue, and on which the kettledrums used to be beaten, was let loose, and allowed to graze in the field.

The child continued to beat his drum, this time to drive away the camel. An old peasant, who knew that it was this camel on which kettledrums were beaten day and night, said to the child, " Don't waste your effort, for this is the camel which bears the kettledrums, and which has too often heard similar sounds to be frightened by them ".

E. E. He has lived too near a wood to be frightened by owls.

Note. A variant form reads شتره نقار خانه است از این صداها the last part of which means " He is not scared by such sounds ".

F. T. There is no other bird that is so unfortunate as I am on account of my broken wings; yet I flatter myself that I am a pigeon of the Sanctuary. Cf. دلم خوش است زن بیگم etc.

Note. By "the Sanctuary" is meant the holy place in Mecca where pilgrims perform their ceremonies, and the pigeons thereof are immune from being killed, or hit by stones. Nevertheless, the pigeon referred to in the verse seems to prefer freedom, which makes life really happy, to such immunity. One might freely say, "Freedom before safety".

F. T. Healthy bowels are better (for a child) than a tender mother.

Note. Since the original meaning of روان is "running or flowing", شکم روان is a state of health in which one is not constipated.

F. T. The belly is a subordinate organ, and is satisfied with anything which it receives.

Same as سیر از گرسنه etc. شکم سیر از شکم گرسنه خبر ندارد

شنیده‌ای که زن آبستن رگل میخورد اما نمیدانی چه گلی است
T. You have heard that pregnant women eat clay, but you do not know what kind of clay it is. { Used in cases when confusion is caused by imperfect knowledge }.

Notes. (1) The clay that pregnant women sometimes fancy is either Silicas aluminis, کل سرشوی داغستانی. The latter, which literally means "clay with which one washes one's head", is a kind of clay which, according to British scientific authorities, of whose finding the author was informed during his stay in London, consists principally of montmorillonite. Some Iranian women still use it for cleansing their hair. (2) The pvb. is susceptible of grammatical changes. Thus, one might say شنیده است etc. i. e. such a one has heard, etc.

F. T. Starting with a jest, in the end one will find oneself to be in earnest.

Notes. (1) A variant form replaces جدی میشود by بجدی میکشد. (2) This saying is a caution against making jokes, but there also exists the jocular saying چه شوخی‌ای که نصف بیشترش جدی نباشد q. v.

F. T. I have married in order to tidy myself, not my room. { Said by a woman who thinks about adorning herself, rather than doing house work }.

Notes. (1) وسه is woad or indigo with which women dyed their eyebrows. (2) وصله کردن is to patch up garments.

(3) The resemblance between the words وسه and وصله which produce a sort of "assonance", gives some beauty to the P. saying.

شوهرم برود کاروانسرا نانمش بیاید حرم سرا F. T. So long as my husband earns bread, I don't mind where he works. (Lit.) Let my husband go to the caravanserai, (but) let his bread come to the harem, i. e. the women's apartment.

Note. The vulgar pronunciation of کاروانسرا is 'karom-sara', which rimes with حرم سرا 'haramsara'.

شوهرم شغال باشد نانم تو تغار باشد F. T. I don't mind if my husband is a jackal, so long as my bin is full of bread.

Note. It is again the assonance between the words شغال and تغار (See شوهر کردم وسه کنم etc.), which gives a proverbial shape to the P.; otherwise the thought expressed by it seems to have been greatly exaggerated.

شوی زن زشت روی نابینا به [سعدی] F. T. An ugly woman's husband should better be blind.

Note. Dehkhoda gives a variant which replaces نابینا by نازیبا "ugly", in which case the quotation would mean "An ugly woman is fit for an ugly man." But then it does not suit the context in the story from Sa'di, which goes as follows:- A very ugly woman was married to a blindman. An eye-doctor in those days claimed to be able to cure blindness, but the woman's father was unwilling to have his son-in-law cured, and said, in reply to those who asked him the reason, "I fear lest my daughter be divorced if her husband is cured".

شیر آدمی در بهتره که پادشاه ستمگر F. T. A man-devouring lion is better than a tyrant king.

شیر از مورچه میگریزد F. T. A lion may avoid (or run away from) an ant.

شیر بی دم و سر و اشکم که دید [مولوی] F. T. No one has ever seen a lion having no tail, head, and belly. [This refers not only to an extraordinary and unimaginable thing, but to an organization which has been greatly tampered with, and consequently robbed of its true nature. The mother story, which has been versified by the poet Mowlavi, and which has a somewhat different implication, runs briefly as follows ]:

A man from Ghazvin went to a tattoist and asked him to tattoo his body with the figure of a lion. The first punctures, however, caused him to shrink with pain, and he cried, "What are you doing?" "I am designing a lion on your body, as ordered by yourself", said the tattoist. "And where have you started from?" said the man. "From the lion's tail", was the reply. "Grant for a while", said the man, "that the lion has no tail, and proceed with another member".

The tattoist then began to prick in the pigments required for the design of the lion's ear. But this time also the Ghazvini fool was unable to stand the pain, and shouted, "What part of the animal is that?" "It is the ear", said the tattoist, "which forms part of the head". "But let us suppose that the lion has no head", said the man.

The third time the tattoist proceeded with designing the lion's belly, though it was obvious that the man was no less sensible to the pain. So he cried, "What part of the animal are you working at now?" "It is the belly", answered the tattoist, who was growing impatient. "Grant now that the model lion had no belly to begin with", said the fool. Whereupon the tattoist dropped his tools, and said in despair, "Has any one ever seen a lion having no tail, head, and belly?"

شیر تا گرسنه نشود شکار نمیکند F. T. It is only when hungry that the lion seeks its prey.

شیر را بچه همی ماند بدو [مولوی] T. The lion's whelp resembles its parent. Cf. تره بتغش میرود etc.

E. E. Like father, like son.

شیر علم کی بود همس شیر ژبان [خاقانی] F. T. No comparison between the ( lifeless ) lion of the flag and the ( living ) formidable lion ?

Note. شیر علم i. e. the figure of the lion on a (Persian) flag, may be rendered in E. "a man of straw" or "a cardboard cavalier", and is a synonym of رستم در حمام q. v.

شیر مرغ E. E. ( a ) Goat's wool. ( b ) Blue diamond.

T. Hen's milk.

Note. The expressions in both languages refer to things which do not exist, but the P. implies an extremely rare and precious object, whence comes the expression از شیر مرغ از تاجان آدمیزاد i. e. everything which can possibly be imagined—beginning with 'hen's milk', and ending with 'human soul'.

شیری یا روباه ؟ T. Are you a lion or a fox ? { Mearing, "Have you succeeded in doing what you proceeded to do, or in delivering your message, or not ? }

شیشه بشکسته را پیوند کردن مشکل است F. T. Broken glass cannot be mended.

E. E. What is done cannot be undone.

Cf. also چیزی که شود باره etc.

شیشه و تبر T. Glass and axe. { Referring to things which are incompatible with each other }.

شیطان با مخلصان بر نیاید و سلطان با مفلسان [سعدی] T. The Devil cannot prevail over sincere devotees, just as the king can do nothing to the indigent.

شیطانرا درس میدهد E. E. He knows one point more than the Devil.

T. He teaches the Devil.

صاحب درد باش تا بدرمان برسی F. T. (1) Unless you have a feeling that there is something wrong, you will not (be able to) remedy it. (2) The pleasure of being cured depends on the possession of illness.

صبح خاستم که خضری به بینم با خرس دچار شدم T. I rose in the morning to meet Elias, but encountered a bear.

Note. خضر and خرس present a similarity which may be considered a sort of "assonance".

صبح صدایش (با آوازش) بلند میشود F. T. The sound will be heard in the morning (i. e. The result will be known in due course). { From the following anecdote }:

A certain burglar, finding it difficult to pull out the door of a house, set about sawing its pivot (or, according to some, piercing the door by means of a bow-drill).

The owner of the house was awakened by the noise, but, being unable to discern anything in the dark, asked, "Who are you, and what the hell are you doing?" The man replied, "Being a violinist, I am playing on the violin". "And where is the sound of the violin?" asked the owner of the house. "The sound of this violin", said the burglar, "will be heard in the morning".

Notes. (1) Mowlavi has a versified story, which must have originated the above anecdote. But his version mentions that the burglar was "undermining the wall of the house", and that "he said he was a drummer, and was now beating his drum". (2) It was really کمانچه "kamancheh", the predecessor of the violin to which the burglar of the first version was referring, as the kamancheh has a leg which rests on the ground while being played, and the movement of its bow, which is applied to the strings at right angles, resembles that of the bow turning a drill.

صبر تلخ است ولیکن بر شیرین دارد [سعدی] F. T. Patience is bitter, but its fruit is sweet. Cf. the next entry.

صبر و ظفر هر دو دوستان قدیمند بر اثر صبر نوبت ظفر آید [حافظ] F. T. Patience and victory are old friends; the latter follows in the footsteps of the former.

E. E. (a) Patience opens all doors. (b) Everything comes to him who waits. (c) Patience and perseverance won a wife for His Reverence. (d) How poor are they that have no patience (Shakespeare).

***

عاقبت جوینده یا بنده بود {مولوی} F. T. Who seeks will find at last.

عاقبت گرگ زاده گرگ شود. گرچه با آدمی بزرگ شود {سعدی}

E. E. What is bred in the bone will come out in the flesh.

F. T. In the end the young of the wolf will turn a wolf, though it grows up with a human being.

عاقلا نرا اشاره ای E. E. (a) A word to the wise (is sufficient).

(b) A word is enough to the wise. (c) A nod for the wise (, a rod for the fool).

Cf. العاقل یکنفه الاشاره etc.

عاقل بکنار آب تا پل می جست دیوانه پا برهنه از آب گذشت

F. T. While the wise (or rational) man was seeking a bridge, the barefooted fool took to the water and crossed the river. Cf. تا عاقل بی پل میکشت etc. and the explanation following same.

عاقل دوبار فریب (یا گول) نمیخورد T. The wise man is not deceived twice. Cf. اگر یکبار مغبونم کردی etc.

عالم آنکس بود که بد نکند نه بگوید بخلق و خود نکند {سعدی}

F. T. A good preacher (lit. a learned man) is he who avoids evil acts, not he who preaches it to others, but practises it not himself.

عالم بیعمل بچه ماند؟ بزنبور بی عسل {سعدی}

F. T. A learned man without (good) deeds is like a bee which gives no honey (but stings).

Notes. (1) The full form of this, as given in the Golestan, is بچه ماندگفت بزنبور بی عسل i. e. They asked a certain man, "To what is a learned man without deeds compared?" He answered, "To a bee which gives no honey." (2) عالم means also, especially in its pl. form olama, a doctor of theology and sacred law.

عالم بیعمل درخت بی بر است T. A learned man without deeds is a fruitless tree.

عالمی ناپرهیزگار کوری است مشعلہ دار [سعدی] T. An incontinent preacher (or theologian) is a blindman holding a torch.

عالمی را کہ گفت باشد و بس هر چه گوید نگیرد اندر کس [سعدی] F. T. If a moralist (or preacher) has nothing more than mere words, nothing that he says will have effect on others.

عدو در چہ و دیو در شیشہ بہ F. T. Better the Devil confined in a glass and one's enemy imprisoned in a well.

عدو شود سبب خیر اگر خدا خواهد F. T. The enemy may, if God wills, do good (or be a cause of blessing).

عروس خیلی خوب بود گر ہم در آورد F. T. The bride was very beautiful; so she got scabby as well. [Said ironically when a state of affairs, far from being improved, has been aggravated]. Cf. بسیار خشبو است etc. & سرناچی کم بود etc.

عروس کہ بما رسید شب کوتاه شد F. T. When it was my turn to enjoy fruition with the bride, the night became short. [Stressing an unexpected change of fortune].

عروسی کہ مادر تعریفش را بکند برای آقا دائیش خوب است T. The bride who is praised by her mother is fit for her (maternal) uncle. Cf. دختری کہ etc.

عروسی نکرده بچہ در گھوارہ خواباندن F. T. To lull one's child to sleep in the cradle before being married.

E. E. To count one's chickens before they are hatched. [Adapted from the usual form "Don't count your chickens before they are hatched". Cf. جوجہ را در بانیز می شمارند].

عزت ز قناعت است و خواری ز طمع
با عزت خود بساز و خواری مطلب

F. T. Contentment honour doth breed,
While contempt is caused by greed;
Seek not, therefore, to be contemptible,
And hold in esteem your honour indeed.

Note. This is probably a P. version of the Arabic quotation عز من قنع ذل من طمع which is attributed to Ali, Mohammed's son-in-law, and which means, "Whosoever is contented attains honour, and whosoever is covetous is humiliated. P. poetry has moulded this thought into a quatrain, of which the first two lines are quoted above, and the last two lines are as follows:

از مردم این زمانه یاری مطلب      وز شاخ برهنه سایه داری مطلب

i. e. Seek not assistance from the people of the day; nor expect a bare branch to give you shade.

F. T. Every man is the architect of his own honour. [Adapted from the famous E. quotation "Every man is the architect of his own fortune"].

F. T. To the sour-tempered honey itself is bitter.

F. T. Saying "Honey" does not sweeten one's mouth. See از حلوا حلوا گفتن etc. and the E. E. given for it.

F. T. If she were honey people might touch her for a taste, but she is not. [This means that there is no fear of this girl or woman being spoiled if she associates with men].

F. T. Should an old man fall in love, it will end in disgrace.

F. T. Love and the odour of musk cannot be hidden.

E. E. Love, a cough, and the itch cannot be hid.

عطایش را بلقایش بخشیدم [سعدی] F. T. I dispensed with his gift on account of his features. [From an anecdote in the book of Golestan by Sa'di, which is summarized as follows]:

A poor man was advised to appeal to a very rich man who would be sure to give him pecuniary aid, but when he came to the rich man's place, and saw his scowling aspect, he turned back without saying a word. On being asked why he did not ask the rich man for a gift, he replied, "I dispensed with his gift on account of his features."

عفو کردن (بر) ظالمان جور است بر مظلومان [سعدی] T. Forgiving the oppressors is cruelty to the oppressed. Cf. ترجم بر etc. E. E. He hurts the good who spares the bad.

عقب يك شپش تا مورچه خورت ميروند T. He goes as far as Moorchekhort to bring back his louse. (Freely) He is so mean that he would not lose a louse. E. E. He won't give away (or lose) the droppings of his nose.

عقد پسر عمو را با دختر عمو در آسمان بسته اند F. T. The marriage of cousins is predestinated. Lit. The marriage contract of cousins is concluded in heaven. [In Iran the custom of marrying one's cousin is considered to be a good one].

Note. By "cousin" in this case is meant the son or daughter of one's paternal uncle.

عقل بکوچکی و بزرگی نیست F. T. Age has nothing to do with wits. Cf. بزرگی بعقل است نه بسال

عقل چیز دگر و مدرسه چیزی دگر است F. T. Intelligence is quite different from knowledge acquired in schools.

عقل خودت که این باشد وای بعقل بچه هات F. T. If your own wits are to that extent, Heaven save us from your children's wits. [Said to one who does a silly act].

عقل روستائی از پس میرسد F. T. The wits of a country yokel follow his acts.

عقل قوت گیرد از عقل دگر [مولوی] F. T. One's wisdom is strengthened by another's.

E. E. Two heads are better than one.

عقل که نیست جان در عذاب است F. T. Lack of reason brings torment to the spirit.

عقل و دولت قرین یکدگرند [سعدی] F. T. Good sense and good fortune are akin.

علاج فاسد به افسد محال است F. T. The elimination of an evil by a worse evil is an absurdity.

Note. The expression دفع فاسد به افسد where دفع means 'averting or curing' is of frequent usage.

علاج واقعه قبل از وقوع باید کرد [سعدی] F. T. The remedy should be prepared before the accident.

E. E. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

علت برود و (لیک) عادت نرود F. T. The cause may disappear, but the habit will remain.

علت عاشق ز علت هاجدا است [مولوی] F. T. Love-sickness is quite different from other diseases.

علف باید بدهان بزی خوش (با شیرین) بیاید F. T. It is the goat which has to choose the grass it likes.

E. E. (Same as for سلیقه ها مختلف است).

Notes. ( 1 ) Dehkhoda has علف بدهان بزی شیرین میاید which would be a definite assertion that goats find grass to be sweet. Even if the word "goats" were read with emphasis, it would not be quite the same as علف باید بدمن بزی شیرین بیاید ( 2 ) The pvb. may mean also that every one is the best judge of his own affairs. ( 3 ) بزی is the diminutive for بز and means "little goat", while the word for "kid" is بزغاله

علم بدی نیست اسفناج T. Spinach is not a bad grass.

Note. This saying has different implications. Firstly, it is said to one who is eating anything with great relish, and amounts to saying, "It doesn't fare ill with you", which is ironical for "You are having a very good time with it". Secondly, the originator of this phrase intended perhaps to say, "Spinach is a very good vegetable", but since he had believed, before tasting it, that it was a useless grass, after tasting it he said, in an attempt to save his face, that it was not a bad grass.

علم از بهر دین پروردن است نه از بهر دنیا خوردن { سعیدی }
F. T. Learning (or knowledge) is intended for cultivating religion, not for worldly enjoyments.

علم چندانکه بیشتر خوانی چون عمل در تو نیست نادانی { سعیدی }
T. However much you acquire learning, so long as you do not practise what you have learned, you are ignorant.
E. E. Action is the proper fruit of knowledge.

F. T. Ali will remain alone with his fountain. { From the following anecdote }:

A certain preacher was narrating the tradition that on the Judgment Day Ali, the Prophet's son-in-law, would cause the righteous people to drink from the water of Kowsar—a river (or, for purposes of this anecdote, a fountain) in Paradise. He then began to enumerate a series of sins of commission and omission, which would disqualify a person for drinking the holy water.

When the preacher had finished the sermon, one of the audience, who thought the fulfilment of the qualifying conditions by a human being was impossible, rose and said, "In these circumstances Ali will remain alone with his fountain."

Notes. (1) This pvb. is susceptible of grammatical changes; for example, one can say علی ماند و حوضش i. e., "Only Ali remained there and his fountain", meaning thereby that every one turned away from such and such a person, and he was left alone. (2) All lexicographers tell us that Kowsar is the name of a river in Paradise, while the tradition giving birth to this anecdote calls it حوض کوثر, i. e. the pond or pool of Kowsar. Steingass writes, "A river in Paradise whence all the other rivers derive their source". To combine these, I have found it necessary to use the word "fountain", especially because it is believed that Ali will give the pious to drink from it.

F. T. It is difficult to unite, but easy to disunite.

F. T. Mr. "Know-All", even if he went to hell, would say the fuel was damp.

Note. The original meaning of فضول is "meddling". But in modern colloquial P. it means "a meddler or blabber", or adjectivally, "meddlesome or officious". However, in the pvb. in question, "know-all" is considered to suit the context best.

{ مکتبی } F. T. A man's nature is known by his acts.

E. E. (Same as for برون از کوزه etc.)

Note. The poet has apparently translated the A. pvb. فعل المرء يدل على أصله, which is to the same effect, and which is said to belong to Ali, the Prophet's son-in-law.

F. T. The indigent live next door to hell. { This is due mostly to the fact that they are apt to commit blasphemy or other crimes }.

Note. The above explanation is confirmed by Dehkhoda. However, the expression در جهنم نشسته است is commonly understood to mean "Such a one is in the habit of repeating the phrase 'What the hell do I care?', so often that one might think he is sitting next door to hell". Therefore, the phrase فقیر در جهنم نشسته است may also mean "The indigent person can bear losses with a much greater fortitude than other people, and is disposed to say, 'What the hell do I care?'" Cf. the E. expression "sanguinary language", which is so-called because the word 'bloody' is often used in it.

فکر نان بکن خربزه آب است

( c ) Health is not valued till sickness comes. ( d ) Blessings are not valued till they are gone.

F. T. He knows the value of prosperity who has suffered an adversity. [ From an anecdote, which is to be found in the Golestan of Sa'di, and which may be summarized as follows ]:

A king was once travelling in a ship, accompanied by his slave, who had never before experienced the inconvenience of a ship, and who was, therefore, weeping and showing signs of restlessness. As they could by no means quiet the slave, one of the passengers, who was a wise man, offered to remedy the situation, if the king would allow him to do so. When the king had expressed his anticipated thanks to him, the wise man ordered the slave to be cast into the sea. After he had suffered successive immersions, the slave was seized by the hair and brought toward the ship's rudder, which he held fast with both hands. On being brought on board, the slave ever after held his peace, and sat quietly in a corner.

When asked by the king what the secret of the matter was, the wise man said, " The slave had never suffered the agony of drowning; so now he values the safety of the ship ".

قدر لوزینه خر کجا داند ؟ F. T. An ass will never know the value of almond-cakes. Cf. خر چه داند etc.

E. E. Do not cast pearls before swine.

قدر نانرا گرسنه میدانند T. The hungry man knows the value of bread.

قدم الخروج قبل الولوج [سعدی] F. T. Make sure of the exit before you enter.

E. E. Look before you leap.

{سعدی} قرآن بر سر زبان است و زر در میان جان [سعدی] F. T. The Koran is a matter of reciting words, while gold is a matter of life and death. (Lit.) The Koran is on the tip of one's tongue; while gold is tied up to one's life. {From the following anecdote by Sa'di }:

The son of a wealthy miser fell ill. His well-wishers advised him to read the Koran through, or else to offer up a sacrifice in order to effect the recovery of his son. After thinking for a moment, the miser said, "The first alternative is preferable, for at present the flocks are out of reach". A wise man, being informed of the circumstances, said, "The reason he chose to read the Koran through is that it was merely a matter of reciting words, while the other alternative involved the spending of money, which was a matter of life and death".

قربان برم خدا را يك بام و دو هوا را F. T. Good Heavens! How can there be two kinds of weather over one roof? (Freely) Two atmospheres for the same sphere! {Cited in cases when a person gives two different opinions on a matter under equal circumstances. From the following anecdote }:

A woman once invited to her house her married daughter with her husband, and her married son with his wife. After supper the invitees had to sleep on the house-top on two separate beds placed apart from each other.

In the middle of the night the hostess got up to spy upon the couples. On approaching the bed on which the daughter and her husband were sleeping, she noticed that the couple were sleeping apart; so she awakened them and said, "The weather is rather cold; so you would better hug each other more closely."

She next went to the other end of the roof and noticed that her daughter-in-law was being closely hugged by her husband. So she approached the couple and said, "The weather is not yet cold enough to allow you to sleep like that; you should better sleep apart from each other". Whereupon her daughter-in-law, who had been awake all this time, and had heard what had been said on the other end of the roof, exclaimed, "Good Heavens! How can there be two kinds of weather over the same roof?"

Notes. (1) بوم is a vulgar contraction of بروم and better suits the rythm of the pvb. (2) Sometimes the pvb. is extended thus:

قربان بوم خدا را ، يك بام و دو هوا را
آن سر بوم سرما را این سر بوم کرما را !

where the extension means, " Cold weather at one end of the roof, and hot weather at the other end." ( Here بوم is a vulgar form of بام " house-top or roof " ).

قربان خودم که خر ندارم از گاه و جوش خبر ندارم

F. T. Thanks God I do not possess an ass, or I should have to provide it with straw and barley.

E. E. Much coin, much care.

F. T. Money borrowed for the purchase of a house will be repaid by the aid of God.

قرض عروسی را خدا میدهد (با میرساند)
F. T. Money borrowed for marrying purposes will be repaid by the aid of God. [ A common belief which encourages marrying ].

قرض که رسید بصد تومان هر شب بخور قیمه پلو
F. T. When your debts amount to 100 tomans ( nowadays 1000 rials ), you may have every night delicious dishes for supper.

E. E. ( a ) In for a penny, in for a pound. ( b ) The deeper in debt, the more reckless.

Note. قیمه پلو is a rice dish containing chiefly minced meat and split peas.

قرض وسیله خدا است
T. A loan is a means provided by God.

قسمت را به بینم یا دم خروس را ؟
F. T. Which shall I base myself on—your oath or the cock's tail? [ From the following anecdote ]:

A man was running away with a cock which he had stolen from a house, when he was overtaken and stopped by the owner of the cock. When told to return the bird, he swore that he had not stolen it, whereas the cock's tail was visible from under his coat, and could be seen by the claimant. So the latter said, "Which shall I base myself on—your oath or the cock's tail?"

The pvb. is cited when a person makes a denial which can be refuted by good evidence.

قسمت کن یا مغبون است یا ملعون (This is a P. version of القسم مغبون او ملعون q. v.).

قسمت کس کس نخورد F. T. No man can take (lit. eat) another's portion. { A predestinarian belief }.

فضا دگر نشود گر هزار ناله وآه بشکر یا بشکایت برآید از دهنی [سعدی] F. T. Destiny will not change, even though one utters a thousand cries and sighs in thankfulness or in complaint. Cf. فرشته ای که وکیل است etc.

E. E. No use striving against Fate.

Note. In view of the fact that "cries and sighs" do not logically suit the idea of "thankfulness", I believe Sa'di must have used some other word, serving as a synonym of شکایت "complaint", and شکر must be a misreading of the unknown word.

قضای نبشته نشاید سترد [فردوسی] F. T. The decree written by Fate cannot be wiped out.

E. E. No use striving against Fate.

قطره بدریا (یا بهمان) بردن T. To carry a drop to the sea (or the Sea of Oman).

E. E. (Same as for بزیر بکرمان بردن).

قلم در كف دشمن است [سعدى] E. E. (a) The Devil is not half so black as he is painted. (b) The lion is not half so fierce as he is painted.

T. The pen is in the enemy's hand. { From a versified anecdote in Sa'di's Boostan, which is summarized as follows:

A certain man saw the Devil in his dream, and seeing that he had a shining aspect and comely features, he approached him with the question, "Why do people generally describe you as an ugly and hideous being, whereas I notice you are so different from their description?" "The way I am depicted by your kind", answered the Devil, "does not represent my true nature, but it cannot be helped, because the pen (or hair-brush) is in the hand of the enemy. As I have driven the human beings from Paradise, they are now trying to revenge themselves on me by their contrary description."

قناعت توانگر کند مرد را [سعدى] E. E. (a) A man is only as rich as he is contented. (b) The contented man is a rich man. (c) The greatest wealth is contentment with a little. (d) To be poor and contented is riches enough.

T. Contentment makes a man rich.

قوز بالا قوز T. One hump on top of another (i. e. one difficulty added to another). {From the following anecdote}:

One night a humpback entered a public bath, where he saw a number of genii dancing and making merry on the occasion of a marriage ceremony. Rather than being frightened by the sight of the superhuman beings, he, too, began to dance, and pretended that he was sharing their joy. The genii were pleased with his behaviour, and compensated him by removing from his back the hump, which they afterwards put on a shelf.

The next day the rumour was spread in the town, and another humpback, who wished to be relieved of the protuberance on his back, entered on another night the same public bath. This time the genii were having a mourning party, but the humpback took no notice of it, and springing in the centre of the party, began to dance. The mournful genii were enraged by this untimely behaviour, and punished the man by putting on top of his hump the one that had been reserved by them on the previous occasion.

قیمت زعفران چه داند خر؟ E. E. Do not cast pearls before swine.

F. T. The ass will never know the value of saffron.

Cf. خر چه داند etc.

قیصریه را برای دستمالی آتش زدن T. To set fire to a trading centre for the sake of a handkerchief (i. e. to commit a gross crime on trivial motives, or for the sake of a small personal gain). [From the following anecdote]:

A haberdasher had a shop boy who had fallen in love with a woman. One afternoon when he was about to close the shop, the woman appeared, and, seeing no one in the shop except her boy friend, pointed to a silk handkerchief, which was hung on the wall, and asked him whether she could have it on his account. The shop boy could not refuse the woman's request, and gave her the handkerchief free of cost.

After the departure of the woman, the shop boy regretted what he had done, for he was sure he would be asked to pay for it, though he could not afford to do so on account of his insignificant wages. After much reflection, the thought of burning down the whole shop occurred to him, so he closed the shop after having left a live coal among the haberdashery. In an hour or so, of course, not only the haberdasher's shop, but the whole arcade, in which the shop was situated, was a victim of fire.

Note. قیسریه was a name given to a trading centre in some of the towns of Iran, such as Tehran, Kashan, Shiraz, etc. It means literally "Caesarea", but it is doubtful whether there is any connection between the two names.*

قیمت شکر نه از نسی است بلکه آن خاصیت وی است [ سعیدی ]

T. It is not the cane that gives value to the sugar, but the property of the sugar itself.

---

* This proverbial phrase has been given with a slight difference on page 64, but the Note given there should be amended on the basis of the one given here.

E. E. A blindman may sometimes shoot a crow.

T. A stupid boy may happen to hit at random a target with his arrow. { From the following anecdote in the book of Golestan, which is refashioned as follows }:

A certain king possessed a ring in which there was a very precious stone. One day when he had gone out for an excursion in the country, he came to a mausoleum surmounted by a dome. He ordered his men to put the ring on the top of the dome, whereafter he proclaimed that whoever should put an arrow through the circle of the ring, the costly ornament should be his. The sharpshooters, who were in attendance on the king, discharged their arrows, but they all missed.

At this juncture a little boy was shooting arrows in all directions on the roof of a caravanserai, and it so happened that one of his arrows was carried by the wind through the circle of the ring. He received a robe of honour, as well as the promised ring, but soon after he burnt his bow and arrow. When asked why he had done this, the boy replied, "In order that the initial honour may remain intact".

گاہی بادا گاہی باصول گاہی بخدا گاہی برسول

F. T. Now singing, now dancing; now appealing to God, now invoking the Prophet.

E. E. By hook or by crook; by fair means or foul.

Note. ادا derived from the A. اداء "performance", means originally the performance of a musical composition, and اصول which literally means "elements", is a kind of tune designed for dancing. But ادا and اصول have come to mean, in modern colloquial Persian, mimicry, and ادا و اصول means to make grimaces or pull a wry face.

گنه كرد در بلخ آهنگری به ششتر زدند گردن مسگری

T. A blacksmith transgressed in Balkh, and a coppersmith was beheaded in Shushtar. [Injustice prevailed everywhere].

Cf. كاسه را كاشي etc.

Note. This verse has neither a sound rythm nor a good rime.

T. The cattle have transgressed, and the headman of the village pays the penalty. [Those at the head of affairs are responsible for the transgressions of the public]. گنه کنند گاوان كد خدا دهد تاوان

T. The sin of one man will lay waste a whole city. گنه يكتن ویرانی يكشهر بود [فرخی]

F. T. The sincere lover has always a ready witness. (Lit.) The testimony of a true lover is in his sleeve. گواه عاشق صادق در آستين باشد

F. T. Why think of a winding-sheet for him, when he has no tomb to begin with? گورش كجا است كه كفنش باشد؟

F. T. To try to conceal what is too manifest. [From the following anecdote, which will show the literal meaning of the indecent phrase]:-

Once a minister who was in attendance on a king, broke wind beyond his control. In an attempt to conceal the rude act, he started to trample on the ground, and produce a shrill noise from his boot, which he rubbed against the stone-paved floor.

The king, who was aware of the cause of the minister's restless condition, asked one of his courtiers, "What is that minister doing?" "He is trampling a fart", was the witty reply. Cf. آفتاب را بکل etc.

گوسفند امام رضا را تا چاشت نمیچراند F. T. He will leave off tending Emam-Reza's sheep before it is noon. { Said of an unreliable or unfaithful servant, or, according to Dehkhoda, of one who is not constant in his friendship. Others believe it refers to one who does a charitable act half-heartedly, inasmuch as the sheep belong to Emam-Reza (the eighth Imam of the Shiites), whose sheep it is pious to tend.

Note. چاشت (chasht) is the middle hour of the forenoon, and means also an early lunch.

گوسفند در فکر جان است قصاب در فکر دنبه T. The sheep worries about its life, the butcher about the fat.

لاف از سخن چو دُر توان زد
آن خشت بود که پر توان زد [نظامی]

F. T. Few and precious words are pearls

Of which one may rightly boast;

Too many words are cheap as dirt,

Or like the shells along the coast.

Note. The word خشت is applied to bricks, which are made of clay moulded by hand, and left in the sun to dry. As a great number of such bricks can be made within a short time, to these the poet is comparing profuse words.

لاف در غربت، آواز در بازار مسگرها
T. Bragging in a strange country and shouting in the coppersmiths' market. [Just as one's voice is drowned in a place where many coppersmiths hammer their vessels, a man away from his country may say anything about himself without meeting a refutation].

E. E. He is not fit to tie his shoe-laces.

Notes. ( 1 ) A variant form of this expression is لایق جفت کردن کفش او نیست i. e. He is not worthy enough to place his shoes together. ( 2 ) It was the duty of a servant to pour water on the hands of his master before and after a meal, or to place his master's shoes together in readiness for him to wear them.

T. لایق هر خر نباشد افسری bridle.

Notes. ( 1 ) افسر seems to be a contraction of افسار , though it now has two meanings: "crown" and "officer". ( 2 ) The version of the pvb., as given here, is exactly the same as that given in my text of جامع التمثیل Jame-ot-tamseel, a book on Persian proverbs. Dehkhoda, though quoting from the same source, gives لایق هر سر نباشد افسری which is intended to mean "Not every head is worthy of the crown". I believe, however, that this is not logically correct, and should better read لایق افسر نباشد هر سری

Once Molla-Nassreddin complained to the magistrate that his loin-cloth, coverlet, carpet, and turban, had been stolen. When the thief was arrested, it was found that he had stolen from Molla's house nothing more than a loin-cloth. When asked why he had asserted that so many things had been stolen, Molla answered that though the stolen goods was primarily a loin-cloth, it had served him as his coverlet, carpet, and turban as well.

E. E. We have sown our wild oats. (با بیخسته ایم)

T. We have sifted our flour.

Note. Sometimes this is extended by adding to it i. e. " and have hung up the sieve".

F. T. The bereaved need not hire a mourner. Cf. تو مادر مرده را etc.

F. T. I am willing to let loose the skin, but the skin will not let me go. [From the following anecdote]:

A bear was once driven downstream by a torrent, with its head bent toward the water. One of the men standing on the shore thought it was a skin-churn which had been allowed to drift, so he jumped into the water to bring it ashore. But the bear firmly seized the covetous man, who now had to grapple with the animal only to save his life. When the men on the shore shouted to him, "Let the skin float, if you cannot bring it", he shouted back, "I am too glad to let the skin go, but the skin will not let me go".

Another version of the story, according to Dehkhoda, who has quoted it from a book called Feehem<sup>a</sup>teeh, makes the bear look like a fur cloak, which is coveted by a thinly-clothed mendicant.

Note. The story refers to cases when people are involved, from covetous motives, in difficulties which they are too glad to get rid of, rather than derive the benefits coveted by them.

مادر با سبب بچه میخورد قند و کلوچه F. T. The mother eats of the sugar and cake pretended to be meant for the child.

Cf. بنام ما بکام تو etc. & بیبانه بچه

مادر را دل سوزد دایه را دامن F. T. Of the mother it is the heartstrings, while of the nurse it is only the garments, that are torn.

Note. The P. has "The mother's heart burns", which figuratively means, "She feels a great sympathy for, or greatly pities, her child", and the idea of burning suits nicely the nurse's garments.

پدر و مادر عاشق بیعارند (See) مادر عاشق بیعار است

مادر که نیست با زن پدر باید ساخت T. One who has no mother should put up with his step-mother.

ما که رسوای جهانیم غم عالم پشم است
F. T. He who has been disgraced before all men should not worry about a whole world of other troubles.

Note. پشم which literally means "wool", figuratively stands for anything which is not worth worrying. Thus, the phrase پشمش بدان which is in frequent use, means "Nevermind" or "Don't care".

ما که کافریم کافر تر F. T. Since we are ( reputed to be ) infidel, we might as well be more so. Cf. ما که در جهنم هستیم etc.

ما که خوردیم اما نگوئید لره خر بود F. T. True, we have eaten the dish, but don't flatter yourself that the Lur was a fool. [ Quotation from the following story ]:

One of the natives of Istaban, who had travelled to Bakhtiari, was talking one day about the delicious dishes prepared by the inhabitants of Istaban, among them kalleh-pacheh ( dish of sheep's head and trotters ). One of the audience travelled shortly after to Istaban, and fancied the much-praised dish. While in search for a shop where it would be sold, he happened to pass by a cobbler's shop, where he saw an earthen tub filled with water, in which the cobbler had soaked some pieces of leather. Taking this for the dish he was searching, he gave some money to the cobbler and asked to be served with a portion of kalleh-pacheh.

The cobbler, taking advantage of the stranger's stupidity, granted his request, and he began to dip his bread in the dirty water and eat it. He even put a piece of leather in his mouth, but had to swallow it quickly, finding that it could not be chewed. He then left the remainder, which he could no more eat, before the cobbler, and on his departure from the shop, said, " It is true that I have eaten the dish, but don't flatter yourself that I was a nincompoop ".

Notes. (1) The above quotation is often cited by one who has been deceived, and who after discovering it, tries to join in the laugh. It amounts to saying, " I have found out, or knew beforehand, your deceitful intention ". (2) The inhabitants of Bakhtiari, and those of Luristan, are called Lurs, and these are regarded, for no good or specific reason, as simpletons.

ما که رفتیم اما این رسم خانه داری نیست F. T. I am leaving the house ( in disappointment ), but this is not proper household management. [ From the anecdote of the thief who had entered a poor man's house, and could not find anything which was worth carrying away, and on leaving, cried out to the owner of the house, "I am leaving the house, etc. etc."

Notes. (1) The quotation is usually, though jestingly, cited as a reproof of people who do not properly look after household management or domestic establishment. (2) Some people expand the anecdote by relating that the thief had spread a large cloth wrapper on the ground, in order to wrap in it the stolen goods, and that while he was on search, the poor man and his wife were awakened by the noise, and seeing the wrapper, used it as their carpet, as they had been lying on the bare ground—an incident which aggravated the thief's disappointment.

مال از بهر آسایش عمر است نه عمر از بهر گرد کردن مال [سعدی]

T. "Riches are for the comfort of life, not life for the sake of amassing riches".

مال است نه جان است که آسان بتوان داد F. T. It is money (or property); it is not life that one could easily part with. { This is what a miser would say when required to give money for some purpose }. Cf. بول است etc.

مال را هر کسی بدست آرد رنجش اندر نگاهداشتن است

T. Any one can acquire wealth (or earn money); the difficulty lies in keeping it. Cf. پول پیدا کردن etc.

مال علی و اصل علی F. T. Ali's property will come to him (i. e. The rightful party will in the end enjoy his right).

Note. Such is Debkhoda's version, which seems to be correct in view of the explanation given. But what I have heard from the mouth of the public is مال علی بوصول علی which would mean "Ali's property (or money) should be spent for meeting him".

مال ما گل منار است مال مردم زیر تغار T. Ours are hung on to a minaret; others' are under the tub (i. e. People conceal their own faults, but reveal ours).

مال مردم را با مردم باید خورد F. T. What we get from others we should share with others.

مال مرده وفا ندارد F. T. What is bequeathed by a person does not last long.

Note. A variant form of this saying replaces وفا ندارد by عقب مرده میرود i. e. "goes after the dead".

مال مفت از عسل شیرین تر است T. Property acquired free of cost is sweeter than honey.

مال همه مال است مال من بیت المال! T. Every one else's property is a (private) property, but mine is common property! (i. e. Every one tries to appropriate my property, as if it belongs to the community, while he believes that his property is privately - owned, and should not be appropriated by others).

Note. بیت المال (beytoimal) is an obsolete Islamic term meaning " public treasury ".

مال یکجا میرود گمان هزار جا T. Stolen property is taken to one spot, but suspicions ( regarding the thief ) are directed to many places.

Note. A variant form of this pvb. replaces گمان by ایمان which means " faith " - the idea being that where there is an unjust suspicion, the faith of the suspected shall belong to the suspector.

ماما (چه) که دو تا شد سر بچه کج درمیاید E. E. ( a ) Too many cooks spoil the broth. ( b ) Two captains sink the ship.

ماما دید زائیدن یادش آمد F. T. The sight of the midwife suggested the birth. { Referring to one who shows no initiative for doing a specified act, or does not remember to do it, until he sees others do it }.

مامور دولت است حقش را باید داد T. He is a government official, and must be given his due. { Quotation from the following story } :

One winter night when the weather was intensely cold the governor of a certain town, who was seriously ill, ordered his men to fetch a physician from a neighbouring village. The physician came in time and wrote out a prescription, but, far from being given any fees for his troubles, on his way back he was stopped short by one of the governor's servants, who demanded from him a tip.

The unlucky physician was forced to return to the governor's residence and set forth his complaint against the servant. However, on hearing his case the governor said, "Yes, he is a government official, and must be given his due". {The story reflects a state of affairs when absolute injustice and despotism prevail }.

F. T. The fish is fresh whenever caught (i. e. Such and such a thing can be done at any time).

***

F. T. When fish and yoghurt are eaten together, the Angel of Death says, " Am I to blame ? "

Note. It is commonly believed that fish and yoghurt, when eaten together, are physiologically injurious to the system, although modern medicine has not yet confirmed this. However, it is chiefly the pun on the word ماست "yoghurt", which gives some beauty to the saying. At the end of the sentence this word is a contraction of ما "we" or "us" and است "is", the phrase meaning, "Is it again our fault ? "

شیر T. A starter good enough to ferment nine مایهٔ نه من شیر "mans" of milk (i. e. a very seditious person).

Notes. (1) Nine "mans" would roughly be equal to 27 litres. (2) مایه when used in baking bread is yeast or leaven.

مبارک خوشگل بود آبله هم در آورد F. T. The black man was beautiful (ironical), and then caught small-pox. { Cited when a state of affairs goes from bad to worse }.

F. T. The police superintendent controls the markets, not the private houses. Cf. the next entry and the Note appended thereto.

T. What business has the police superintendent within the house ?

Note. To quote from a translation of Golestan by Platts , " محتسب ( mohhtaseb ) is properly the inspector of the markets and of the weights and measures , etc. ; to him is also assigned the duty of preventing riotous and disorderly conduct, or public wrong-doing of any kind".

T. The police superintendent who drinks wine will excuse the drunkard. See Note on the preceding entry.

T. It is the touchstone that discovers the gold , and the beggar who recognizes the miser.

محنت زده را زهر طرف سنگ آید F. T. He who is afflicted is hit by stones from all directions. Cf. the E. A low hedge is easily leaped over.

مدح (ترتیب خود کردن etc.) (Same as) مدح خود کردن پنبه جاویدن است

مرا بخیر تو امید نیست شر مرسان [سعدی] T. I don't expect good from you, (but at least) do me no harm.

(مرا بعلت بیگانگی ز خویش مران که) دوستان وفا دار بهتر از خویشند [سعدی] (See under دوستان وفا دار etc.)

مرا بگور شما نمی گذارند T. They will not bury me in your tomb (i. e. My sins will not be laid against you).

مرا دردی است اندر دل که گر گویم زبان سوزد و گر پنهان کنم ترسم که مغز استخوان سوزد F. T. I have a heart-ache, which if expressed, will burn the tongue, and if kept inside, will, I am afraid, consume the marrow in my bones.

مرد آخر بین مبارك بنده ایست (See under مرد مرگوبه etc.)

مرد آنست که لب بندد و بازو بگشاید F. T. The true man is he who closes his mouth and opens his arms. Cf. دو صد گفته etc.

مردان نزنند لاف مردی T. True men do not boast of their manliness.

مرد باید که در کشاکش دهر سنگ زیرین آسیا باشد [سعدی] F. T. The true man must, in the struggles of the world, be like the lower stone in the mill.

مرد باید که گیرد اندر گوش ورنه نوشته است پند بر دیوار [سعدی] T. A man should hearken advice, though it may be written on the wall.

E. E. (a) If the counsel be good, no matter who gave it.
(b) Do as the friar saith, not as he doeth. {From Spannish origin}.

مرد خردمند هنر پیشه را عمر دو بایست در این روزگار
تا یکی تجربه آموختن با دگری تجربه بردن بکار

F. T. A wise, ingenious person must live two lives in this world, in order that during the first he may acquire experience and during the second he may apply the experience so acquired.

T. A conceited person is not godly
(or cannot discern the truth). Cf. خدا بینی etc.

T. A man is hidden beneath his words (i. e. until he has spoken, his faults and virtues remain hidden). Cf. تا مرد سخن نگفته باشد etc.

(Same as مرد که تنبانش دو تا شد بفکر زن نو می افتد etc.) تنبان مرد که دو تا شد

T. To die honourably is better than to live in ignominy.

E. E. (a) Either die, or live with honour. (b) An honourable death is better than an inglorious life (Socrates).

T. He is dead whose name is not mentioned in connection with a good act.

Note. The first hemistich to this is سعدیا مرد نکو نام نیرد هرگز

i. e. O Sa'di, he never dies who has a good reputation.

T. To wash the body of a dead person clean (i. e. to give full measure; to perform a duty faithfully).

Note. This proverbial expression is mostly used in such sentences as هیچ مرده ای را باین پاکی نشسته بود i. e. This time he has given full measure.

T. If you respect the dead, he will defile his winding-sheet.

E. E. (Same as for میکنند که رحم میبرد etc.)

مردده شور پلوی را ببرد که موش مردده روی آن باشد

F. T. Damn the dish, however delicious it may be, which contains a dead mouse! {Cited when something mars one's happiness}.

Note. (1) مردده شور is a colloquialism for مردده شوی which means literally "one who washes the dead". So the phrase مردده شور ببرد literally means "May the 'dead-washer' carry (such a thing or person)". In E. this could be rendered by "Damn it!" or "Confound him!"

(2) The pvb. seems to be only in use among the Iranian Jews.

F. T. He who washes the dead is not concerned as to whether the latter is led to paradise or to hell.

T. He who washes the dead is not expected (lit. does not guarantee) to provide the winding-sheet. {Cited in similar instances}.

F. T. The dead man is carried to the grave against his will.

F. T. Test (or prove) your virility before taking a wife.

E. E. (a) Never seek a wife till ye ken what to do with her (Scottish). (b) Look before you leap.

F. T. A man who cannot earn bread should not have such an unrestrained tongue (i. e. he should control his tongue so as not to be rude to his wife).

Note. A variant form of this pvb. replaces انقدر "so much" by یک کز one ell or metre - a long tongue referring figuratively to abusive or rude language.

T. It is no manliness to kick at one who is fallen down.

مرغ جائی رود که چینه بود نه بجائی رود که چی نبود [سعدی؟]
F. T. The bird goes where it finds food, not where it finds nothing.

Note. There is a pun on the words چینه بود and چی نبود although the use of the word چی which is a vulgar form of چیز "thing", detracts from the literary weight of the verse.

مرغ گرسنه ارزن در خواب می بیند T. The hungry fowl dreams of millet.

E. E. (Same as for شتر در خواب بیند etc.)

مرغ هرچه چاق تر باشد دم کونش تنگ تراست F. T. The fatter a hen, the narrower the outlet for her eggs. { This means that rich people are less disposed to be charitable }.

Note. Dehkhoda has "the narrower her ovary (تخمدان)", which, does not seem correct enough for conveying the required sense.

مرغ همسایه قاز است T. The neighbour's hen is a goose (i. e. Other people's property is esteemed more than one's own).

مرغی را که در هوا است نباید بسیخ کشید E. E. (a) Sell not the bear's skin before you have caught him. (b) First catch your hare, then cook him.

T. The bird which is in the air should not be grilled.
Cf. بدشت آهوی etc.

مرغ يك پا دارد T. But one leg to the fowl. { Said when a person is adamant on a point and is not ready to change his mind }.

مرغی که انجیر می چیند نوکش کج است T. The fig-eater (or the bird that eats figs) has a crooked bill (i. e. Not every one is fitted for every work).

مرغ جهل است و زندگی دانش [ناصرخسرو] T. Death is ignorance; life is knowledge.

مرگ خر عروسی سگ (است) F. T. The death of the ass makes a feast for the dogs. Cf. the E. One man's meat is another man's poison.

مرگ حق است برای همسایه T. Death is unavoidable (but) for one's neighbour. {Every one knows that death is unavoidable, but scarcely ever thinks that this applies to himself as well}.

Note. I have also frequently heard مرگ خوب است برای همسایه which lays stress on the selfish implication of the saying.

مرگ میخواهی برو گیلان F. T. You have been given everything you wanted, and you want nothing but death, and for that you have to go to Guilan. {Said to one who is insatiable}.

Note. This is perhaps because it was a custom in Guilan for the relatives of a dead person to bear the expenses connected with his death; in other words, dying involved no expenses in that province. (Doubtful)

مرگ و مهمان چاره ندارند F. T. Death and the entertainment of visitors are inevitable. {Iranian hospitality requires the entertainment of visitors, though they may be uninvited}.

مرگ يك دفعه شيون يك دفعه F. T. Let the wailing finish with the death. Cf. دزدی که آخر شب etc.

ass is riding it ( or Riding an ass amounts to the wages for driving it ) .

***

مزن بی تأمل بگفتار دم نکو گوی اگر دیر گوئی چه غم {سعدی} F. T. Breathe not a word inconsiderately ;

Speak well ; what matters if you speak tardily ?

E. E. Think twice before you speak once.

***

مزه لوطی خاک است F. T. A " looti " is content with dust as a snack after his drink.

Notes. (1) مزه is a morsel taken after an ardent spirit, or even wine. (2) لوطی has various meanings with bad implications, but is often used in colloquial language to mean a person of generous disposition.

***

مستمع بصر بر آید {سعدی} (See under بر آید etc.)

***

مستمع چون نیست خاموشی به است {مولوی} T. Silence is best where there is no audience.

Note. Although مستمع literally means ' one who hears or listens', in the proverbial hemistich given here it means
'one who willingly listens in order to learn'.

***

مستمع صاحب سخن را بر سر کار آورد
( or audience ) gives the speaker encouragement to speak.

***

مستی صبح ندارد F. T. Drunkenness ends with the morning.

***

مستی و راستی E. E. (a) What soberness conceals, drunkenness reveals. (b) When the drink is in, the truth is out.

T. Drunkenness (is) combined with truth.

مسجد جای ر - ن نیست T. A mosque is not to be used as a lavatory. { Cited in similar cases }.

Note. Dehkhoda gives the variant form مسجد جای خر بستن نیست i. e. A mosque is not where one could tie a horse. If this variant is preferred, it is due to the indecent wording of مسجد جای ر - ن نیست

مسکین خر اگر چه بی تمیز است چون بار همی برد عزیز است {سعدی} T. Though the lowly ass is undiscerning, inasmuch as it carries burdens it is dear(ly esteemed).

مسکین خرنك آرزوی دم کرد نا یافته دم دو گوش گم کرد؟ T. The poor little ass desired to have a tail, but before it could find one, it lost both its ears.
Cf. the E. 'He went for wool, but came home shorn' and 'The camel going to seek horns lost his ears', which is of Hebrew origin.

مشت بدرفش زدن T. To strike a blow against an awl.

E. E. (a) To run against the point of a spear. (b) To play with edged tools. (c) To kick against the pricks.

مشتري آخر شب خودش است F. T. He who goes to buy something very late at night must expect to be cheated. { The last shops open during the night usually overcharge customers }.

Note. The original P. wording goes so far as to imply that the last customer of the evening may be killed, in which case no one is responsible for his blood.

مشت نخورده بمشت خود می نازد F. T. He who has not received a blow from another boasts of his own fist.

مشت نمونه خروار است {سعدی} E. E. You may know by a handful the whole sack.

معرفی مرد گذشته مرد است (Same as مرد گذشته etc.)

معشوق خوب روی چه محتاج زیور است؟ [سعدی] I. A beautiful sweetheart needs not be adorned. Cf. حاجت مشاطه نیست etc.

E. E. Fair faces need no paint.

Note. معشوق is of masculine gender and means properly "a man who is loved by another". The regular word for a female sweetheart or a ladylove is معشوقه

معشوق من است آنکه بنزدیک تو زشت است [سعدی] T. "That which is ugly in thy eyes is the object of my love".

Cf. the E. One man's meat is another man's poison.

معما چو حل گشت آسان شود T. A problem solved (lit. a riddle guessed) becomes easy.

مفت باشد گلوله جفت جفت باشد T. I want what is free of cost, even if it is bullets coming in pairs. Cf. شراب مفت etc. & اسب پیشکشی را etc.

مفت را چه گفت؟ E. E. One does not (or You must never) look a gift horse into the mouth. Cf. اسب پیشکشی etc.

F. T. What comments need be given on something which one has received free of cost?

Note. Dehkhoda has مفت را که گفت which would mean "Who says one can obtain a thing free of cost?" However, the different forms may be regarded as separate proverbs.

مفتی و صرافى؟ E. E. (a) Beggars should be no choosers. (b) One does not look a gift horse into the mouth.

Note. مفتی is a vulgarism used for مفت which is both an adjective and an adverb.

مفلس در امان خدا است (P. version of the A. المفلس فی امان الله q. v.)

T. The dice-player (lit. gambler) wants double sixes, but double aces turn up.
E. E. No use striving against Fate.

T. Do not do an ill turn to another if you do not want it done to yourself.
Cf. the Biblical verse "Do unto others as thou wouldst others should do unto thee".

T. Do not knock at another person's door and others will not knock at your door.
E. E. As a man sows, so shall he reap.

F. T. The fly which falls into the bowl does not do much, but disgusts the eater.

T. "A lofty minaret would appear low at the foot of Mount Alvand".
Cf. چراغ بیش آفتاب etc.

F. T. I am as brave (w)as Rostam.

Note. This is a form of equivocal statement with bad grammar, cited in cases when a person boasts of bravery, which is not possessed by him, but by another. In the E. translation given here “(w)as” indicates that the sentence may be read with “as” or “was”.

من آن مورم که در پایم بمالند نه زنبورم که از نیشم بنالند [سعدی]
T. I am the ant, which people tread under their feet, not the bee whose sting causes people to groan. { Pious men prefer to be weak and do no harm than to be powerful and torment others }.

من از بیگانگان هرگز نالم که با من هرچه کرد آن آشنا کرد [حافظ]
F. T. I never complain against strangers, for it is my acquaintance who has always done me an ill turn.
Cf. الاقارب كالقارب

(A.) T. Who seeks (or takes pains) will find.
Cf. از تو حرکت از من برکت and the E. E. given for it.

T. The first halting - place and begging !
{ Used when a bad result arrives unexpectedly early }.
Cf. اول پیاله و درد

Note. It seemed that poor people who went on a journey, especially on pilgrimage, and whose money was too insufficient to carry them through the journey, depended on begging in the last stages thereof. Hence the origination of this pvb., which refers to those who would beg at the very first stage of their journey.

F. T. I am talking of chalk, and he is talking of cheese. (Lit.) I am talking of the sky, and he is talking of rope. Cf. آسمان و ریسمان

E. E. Forbidden fruit is sweet.

F. T. Man grows greedier to do an act when he is forbidden to do it.

T. When I have left this world, let it be turned upside down.

T. I was about to fall, and you gave me a push. [Said in case when a person who is himself disposed to do something is induced or pressed by another to do it].

F. T. I say, "It is a bull", but he tells me to milk it.

F. T. The pure-hearted (or the pious) show their attachment equally to one's face as behind one's back.

T. When there is union among ants, they tear off the formidable lion's skin.
E. E. Union is strength.

T. The ant is Solomon in its own ant. Cf. سگ در خانه etc.
E. E. (a) Every cock is a lord on his own dunghill.
(b) Every dog is a lion at home.

T. The ant gathers (provisions) in summer, in order that it might have ease in winter.

T. An ant is best without wings. Cf. کربۀ مسکین etc.

T. Mice snatch groats from his mouth (i. e. he is so weak and powerless that even mice...).
Note. There are other variants to this phrase, amongst them موش از جیبش بلغور میبرد where دهن is replaced by جیب (pocket).

موش به انبان کاری ندارد انبان بموش کار دارد F. T. It is the mouse which should worry the sack, but in this case it is the reverse.

Note. A variant form of this pvb. is موش نمرود سر انبان انبان میروود سر موش

موش توی دیگ و سواس می افتد T. It is into the pot of the fussy that the mouse falls.

موش توی سوراخ نمیرفت جاروب هم بدمش بست T. The mouse was unable to get into the hole, yet it tied a broom to its tail. [An instance is when a person, though not admitted to a place himself, takes another person along].

موش چیست که کله پاچه اش باشد! F. T. A mouse doesn't amount to anything; much less its head and legs.

Note. کله پاچه (kallepacheh) is food prepared from sheep's head and trotters.

موش و گربه وقتی با هم بسازند وای بدکان بقال F. T. When the mouse and the cat collude with each other, alas for the grocer's shop!

Notes. (1) وای به and وای بحال properly mean "Woe betide (such and such a person or thing)". (2) A variant form of this pvb., which is rather bookish, replaces وقتی by چون. Still another variant reads, موش و گربه که بهم ساختند دکان عطاری خراب میشود where the last part means "the grocer's shop will be ruined", or "the grocer will be impoverished".

مولا درزش نمیروود T. It does not allow a hair to enter its crack. [This means that such a person is staunch, accurate, impeccable, etc.; also, that such a thing is definite, and admits of no interpretation; also, that there is no margin left].

be intrusive to him ).

E. E. To play gooseberry.

موئی از خرس کندن غنیمت است T. It is worth while to pluck a hair from a bear (i. e. to take any small sum from the miser).

موئی را طناب کردن E. E. To make mountains of mole-hills.

T. To make a rope of a hair.

Note. A variant form of this proverbial phrase is يك مو را يك طناب کردن مهتاب را بگل اندودن T. To hide moonlight by mud (i. e. to try to conceal what is too manifest). Cf. آفتابرا بگل etc.

ماهتاب نرخ ماست را می شکند (Same as ماهتاب نرخ ماست را می شکند)

مه چو لاغر شود انگشت نما میگردد [صاب ؟] T. When the moon wanes, they point to it with their fingers. [A man becomes famous as a result of mortification or laborious study].

Note. انگشت نما has usually a bad implication, as it means "notorious (for something bad)", and انگشت نما شدن means "to become a by-word".

مهر درخشنده چو پنهان شود شپیره بازیگر میدان شود (Same as چشمه خورشید چو پنهان شود etc.).

مهر کز علتی بود کین است [سنائی] F. T. Love based on a motive amounts to hatred.

مهره سوراخ دار بزمین نمی ماند T. A bead doesn't stay long on the ground on account of its hole. [Girls do not remain unmarried].

مهره گسر نیک نشیند همه کس نرّاد است E. E. He plays well that wins.

F. T. Throwing lucky dice makes every one a good player. See Note under طاس اگر راست نشیند etc.

مه فشانند نور و سگ عوعو کند [مولوی] E. E. (a) The dog bays the moon. (b) The moon does not heed the barking of dogs.
T. The moon diffuses light, and the dog bays.

مهمان تا سه روز عزیز است T. A guest is welcome up to three days.

E. E. Fish and guests stink after three days.

مهمان خر صاحبخانه است T. The guest is obedient to his host.
(Lit.) The guest is his host's ass. {This means that a guest should not object to, or make any comments on, what is served by the host}.

مهمان روزی خود را باخود میاورد T. The guest brings his own portion. {This is what hospitable and religious-minded people believe}. Cf. مهمان بیش از خودش میاید which is to be preferred to the saying given here.

مهمان نمیخواهی آب زیرپاش کن F. T. If you want your guest to go, sweep under his feet (lit. pour water under his feet).

مهمان هدیه خدا است T. A guest (or visitor) is God's gift.

Note. A variant form of this pvb. is مهمان حبیب خدا است
i. e. A guest is loved by God.

میان بلا بودن به از کنار بلا است (Same as در بلا بودن etc.)

میان پیغمبرها جرجیس را انتخاب (یا پیدا) کردی؟! T. Why did you choose St. George from amongst all the prophets?
(i. e. Of all possibilities you have chosen the least likely).

{From the following anecdote }.

A fox once snatched a cock and ran away, holding it firmly between his teeth. On the way the cock said, "O fox, since you have made up your mind to eat me, do so at least after mentioning the name of a prophet, or other holy person, so that it may become lawful for you to eat my flesh", intending thereby to obtain an escape in the event of the fox opening his mouth. But the cunning fox only squeezed the victim with greater force, and breathed out in a dragging manner the name "Jer-jee-s" (St. George). "Alas!" said the disappointed bird, "from amongst all the prophets you have chosen Jerjees!"

Note. St. George, the patron saint of England, died as a martyr in the year 303 A. D. in the reign of Diocletian, and was looked upon as a (demi-)prophet by the Mohammedans.

میانجی میخورد اندر میان مشت F. T. The mediator receives blows from two sides.

Note. The beauty of the P. lies in that the chief element of میانجی (mediator) is میان (middle), which occurs again in the last part of the sentence.

میان دعوا حلوا قسمت نمی کنند E. E. One can't make war with rose water.

T. They don't distribute sweetmeat in the course of a fight. Cf. در جنگ etc.

میان دعوا نرخ طی کردن (یا معین کردن) T. To settle upon a price during a dispute (i. e. to take advantage of a dispute and indirectly ascertain a fact).

میان دو تن جنگ چون آتش است سخن چین بدبخت هیزم کش است [سندی]

T. A quarrel between two persons is like a fire, and the wretched tale-bearer has to carry the fuel to feed it.

E. E. Tale-bearers are commonly a sort of half-witted men.

میان عاشق و معشوق رمز بسیار است T. There are many hints

(or mysteries) between a pair of lovers.

میان عرصات و خرگامان ! F. T. Trying to gratify one's passions amidst the excitements of the Resurrection Day!

Notes. (1) عرصات, which is originally the pl. of عرصه "court; area; battle-field; etc.", means the open space or court where the last judgment is carried on. Hence, by extension, the word has come to mean 'the Resurrection'. (2) On the Resurrection Day every person is on the run, trying to get hold of some one who would intercede for him with God. It would be stupendous, therefore, to imagine some one who would be so unfeeling as to care only for the gratification of his passions on such a day! (3) A variant form of the pvb. replaces the last word, perhaps because of its indecent nature, by خربکیری i. e. the requisitioning of asses (or beasts).

میان گوشت و ناخن نمی توان جدائی انداخت T. One cannot bring about separation between the finger-nail and the flesh. [Allusion to ties of relationship].

میان هیرو ویر بیازیر ابرویم را بگیر F. T. In the midst of the to-do she thinks only of having her eyebrows plucked. [Said of one who is self-centred]. Cf. میان عرصات etc.

Note. هیرو ویر (hiroveer) is a slang word meaning "bustle or to-do".

می بخور منبر بسوزان مردم آزاری مکن [همای اصفهانی] T. Drink wine and burn down the preacher's pulpit, but avoid inhumanity to mankind (or do not torment your fellow-creatures).

می بینم و می پرسم ! F. T. Why do I ask when I clearly see it? [From the following indecent anecdote]:-

A man asked a woman at the time of sexual intercourse with her, "What is your name?" "My name is Lady Wide", said the out-spoken woman. "How stupid I must be!" retorted the man, "I clearly see it, and still put the question".

میخواهد از جوی بگذرد پایش هم تر نشود T. He expects to wade the stream without getting his feet wet.

E. E. The cat is fain the fish to eat, but hath no will to wet her feet.

***

میخواهی عزیز شوی یا دور شو یا گور شو T. If you wish to become dear, either die or keep aloof from people.

Cf. دوری و دوستی

میدونم کجات میسوزه F. T. I know the burning spot in your body (i. e. I know where your shoe pinches). [From the following anecdote]:

One cold morning the master of a house bade his servant to fetch him a ewer of warm water, which he wanted for use in the W. C. The servant, finding himself in a hurry, filled a ewer with the boiling water from the samovar, and the man, who was not aware of what had been done, poured out the water and burnt himself. On coming out of the W. C. he was so furious that he set on abusing and beating indiscriminately every one with whom he came in contact. But the servant, who knew the real cause of his master's fury, said to him quite calmly, "I know what part of your body is burning".

Notes. (1) It is a religious rite among the Moham-medans and the Jews to purify themselves with water after easing nature. (2) The expression کونش میسوزد is very much used in colloquial Persian, and means, "He is silently angry". (3) میدونم and میسوزه are colloquial forms of میدانم and میسوزد respectively.

میراث پدر خواهی علم پدر آموز [سعی] T. Do you want an inheritance from your father? Then acquire your father's knowledge. [Freely] The best inheritance is learning (or knowledge) handed down by one's father.

***

میراث گرگ مرده بگفتار (یا بگرگ) میرسد T. The hyena (or wolf) comes upon the inheritance of the bear.

Note. A variant form of this pvb. is میراث گرگ مرده بگفتار میرسد which is a regular hemistich, and which means. "The legacy of a dead wolf is acquired by the hyena".

است بسیار T. A poison (or a snake's venom) is fatal, whether the amount be small or great.

را بزیر گرفت F. T. When the monkey could no longer sit on the hot floor, she put down her young and sat upon it. { Referring to a certain monkey who went to a Turkish bath with her young. نان کافر میخوری شمشیر بر کافر مزین
F. T. Do not draw a sword on him who supports you, though he may be an infidel. {Counsel against ingratitude}.

Note. Such is the form of the pvb. as I have heard it, but, though it is a regular hemistich, I do not prefer it to the metreless variant given by Dehkhoda, which reads as follows: -

نان کافر را میخورند بالاش شمشیر میزنند

i. e. One who eats the bread of an infidel defends him by his sword.

نان گندم درویش مزه جو دارد
T. The wheaten bread of a poor man tastes like barley bread. {So also the virtues of a poor man seem to be vices}.

نان گندم شکم پولادی میخواهد
T. Wheaten bread needs a steel stomach. {A mean person gets above himself when he comes upon a fortune}.

نو دیده قبا دیده F. T. See the upstart in his new suit!

نور علی نور T. Light upon light { used in the sense of " So much the better " } . { From the following anecdote } :

A man once called at the house of an acquaintance whose name was Mrs. Light , and was informed that not Mrs. Light but her daughter , Miss Light , was at home , whereupon he said , " So much the better ( as this is light upon light ) " .

Notes. (1) نودی originally means ' a native of Noora district in Mazandaran ' , and is often used as a surname. But the connection between this word and نور which means " light " , has given birth to the proverbial expression and the anecdote related to it. (2) Another version of the anecdote is that they told the man that not only Mrs. Light was at home, but her daughter, Miss Light, was there, too.

نوش خواهی نیش میباید چشید E. E. No pains, no gains.

T. If you want honey, you must bear the bee's sting.

Notes. نوش in its wide sense means a wholesome drink, a treacle, etc. But it has come to mean honey, as well.

نوش با نیش است E. E. (a) No joy without alloy. (b) Bees that have honey in their mouths have stings in their tails (Scottish).

نوشدارو که پس از مردن سهراب دهند E. E. (a) After death the doctor. (b) Shutting the stable door after the steed is stolen (or after the horse has fled).

نوکر باب ششماه چاق است ششماه لاغر T. Servants are fat during six months, and thin during six months. [This refers to six months of employment during which they live well, and a semi-annual period of unemployment when they are in straitened circumstances].

نوکر بی جیره و مواجب تاج سر آقا است F. T. An unpaid servant domineers over his master. (Lit.) A servant who has no ration or salary is a crown on his master's head.

نوکر من نوکری داشت نوکر او چاکری داشت T. My servant had a servant, who had a servant. [Cited in cases when one's servant, instead of doing a thing which he is ordered to do, refers it to another person].

Note. نوکر — a modern word meaning 'servant', is the same as چاکر which is an older word, and which is now used to mean "a humble servant". In this pvb., however, both words have been used for variety's sake.

نوکر نو تیز رو T. A new servant walks fast.

E. E. A new broom sweeps clean.

Note. Some people say, mostly by way of joke, that the very first syllable of نوکر which is نو (new), suggests the necessity of changing one's servants frequently, and hiring new ones.

دل آزار نو که آمد بیسازار کهنه شود دل آزار T. When novelties appear in the bazaar (or market-place), old wares become annoying. Cf. تازه بتازه نو بنو

Note. I have heard some people replace دل آزار by لاله زار (Lalezar), which is the name of a street in Tehran, and explain the pvb. thus: When novelties appear, even Lalezar, which is the best shopping centre, goes out of fashion. But this replacement is either due to ignorance, or based on a joke.

نویسنده داند که در نامه چیست [ سندی ] T. The writer of the letter (only) knows what its contents are.

نه آب بیار نه کوزه بشکن T. Neither fetch water, nor break the jug. [ Cited in cases when one's service does more harm than good ].

نه از آن دایره و دنبک زدنت نه از این زینب و کلثوم شدنت F. T. What does it mean - at one time playing the fool, and at another playing the saint?

Notes. (1) دایره is a tambourine and دَبَك or تَبَك (tombak) a one-headed long drum used in Iranian orchestras. But people who played on these instruments were usually regarded as buffoons. (2) زینب (Zeynab) and کلثوم (contraction of ام کلثوم Ommekolsoom) were the sisters of Emam Hossein. The second hemistich refers to passion-plays in which tragedians played the parts of religious personages, such as زینب and ام کلثوم. Hence the original sense of the pvb. is that it seems strange for a person to assume two opposite characters.

نه از من جو نه از تو دو بخور گاهی برو راهی F. T. Don't expect barley from me, and I won't expect you to run; be content with mere straw, and I shall be content with your walking pace. { This is originally what one may say to a horse, and an instance where it is applicable as a proverb is when an employer is neither willing to pay a good salary to his employee, nor expects good service from him }.

نهال تلخ نگرود به تربیت شیرین F. T. The bitter almond - tree will not bear sweet almonds through cultivation.

E. E. Crooked by nature is never made straight by education.

نه مال داریم دزد ببرد نه ایمان داریم شیطان ببرد F. T. As we have neither wealth nor faith, we need not fear being deprived of the one by thieves, and of the other by Satan. Cf. نه بر اشتری سوادم etc.

نه مال کسرا خورده ایم نه از دیوار کسی بالا رفته ایم T. We have neither appropriated the property of any one, nor climbed up any one's wall. { Said in similar instances }.

نه محقق بوَد نه دانشمند      چارپایی بر او کتابی چند { سعدی }
T. A quadruped loaded with a number of books is not learned; nor is it a seeker of truth.

نه نماز شبگیر کن نه آب توی شیر کن
T. Neither pray by night, nor water your milk. (Freely) If you do not water your milk, you need not say supererogatory prayers by night. {Originally said to the milkman who adulterates his milk with water }.

نه نه ام بهتر از تو نفرین میکند
T. My mother can curse better than you. { From the following anecdote }:

A peasant complained to the governor against the extortions of the local tax-collector. The governor, on hearing his grievances, rather than take an effective measure, began to curse the exacting collector. Whereupon the peasant, who had greater expectations from the governor, turned away in disappointment, and said, "I am going home to see my mother." "And why?" asked the governor. "Because", answered the peasant, "if it is a matter of cursing, my mother can do that better than you." { Injustice must be dealt with only by effective and severe measures; cursing and the like are no remedy at all }.

نه نه نه نه نه پستان - پستان برود قبرستان
F. T. "Dearie, don't you want milk?" - "No! To hell with the breast!" (Lit.) Let the breast go to the grave(-yard). { From the following anecdote }:

A woman was under a vow to breast-feed her son as long as possible, which resulted in the habit remaining in the child even until he attained his adolescence. The day came finally that he was to be married. But, contrary to the expectation of his mother, who believed that he could never be weaned from the habit, the married youth no longer fancied sucking his mother; so she began to be curious about the fact, and walked to the bridal chamber to find out the reason. But when she asked, "Dearest, don't you want the breast?" "No", said the youth, "To hell with the breast!"

Note. The anecdote alludes to the fact that most men turn ungrateful to, and forget, their mothers when they marry.

نه هر آدمیزاده از دد به است که دد ز آدمیزاده بد به است { سعدی }
T. Not every human being excels a wild beast; rather, a wild beast is better than a wicked man.

نه هر آن چیز که او زرد بو باشد زر { ناصر خسرو }

Note. A variant form of this pvb. is

وای بوقتی که فاجاچی گمرکچی شود

i. e. God help us when the smuggler becomes a Customs official.

وجود مردم دانا مثال زر طلا است
بهر کجا که رود قدر و قیمتش دانند [ سمدی ]
F. T. A learned man is like pure gold; since wherever he goes people will appreciate his value.

Notes. (1) وجود usually means "existence", which would make no sense in the verse in question. The words "essence" and "person(ality)" would fit better. (2) طلا is the common word for "gold", being a synonym of زر. But in this case زر طلا (or زر طلای) apparently means "pure gold".

وجود ناقص به از عدم صرف است
F. T. What exists in an imperfect state is better than what does not exist at all.

F. T. When the time comes for eating, the aunt forgets (lit. does not recognize) her niece.

T. When it is time to work I am crippled; when it is time to eat I am strong. Cf. the E. 'To quake at work and sweat at meals' which in this case should be made to read, "I quake at work and sweat at meals".

Note. چلاق and قلیچاق are both Turkish words. The former means "crippled or maim", and the latter is originally made up of two words قول "arm" and چماق "mace or club".

F. T. Make the most of your time to the best of your ability. [حافظ]

F. T. When there is a feast he eats like a beast; when there is a fight, he is out of sight. Cf. وقت کار کردن etc.

وقت ضرورت چو نماند گریز دست بگیرد سر شمشیر نیز [سعدی]
F. T. In an emergency when there is no chance of escape, one will even seize the point of a sharp sword.

وقت گریه و زاری بروید خاله را بیارید
F. T. In trouble and tears you send for auntie; when you have a feast you say this is no place for auntie. (Lit.) When there is weeping, (you say) "Fetch Auntie"; when you have sweetmeat and victuals (you say), "There is no room for Auntie now."

Note. This is a vulgar pvb. with no good rime or rythm.

وقتیکه چیک چیک مستانت بود یاد زمستانت نبود ؟
F. T. When you were warbling in ravishment, that was the time to provide for winter. { From an anecdote which is summarized as follows } : -

In a spring when the nightingale was idling away his time in warbling and visiting various flowers, a certain ant living in a nest beneath the tree which was most frequented by the nightingale, was busy gathering provision for the next winter. Consequently when the cold season arrived the negligent bird was forced by need to beg at the nest of the active insect, which tauntingly made the remark, " Why did you not think about winter in the days when you were foolishly warbling in ravishment ? "

Note. There are several variant forms of this pvb., one of which replaces چیک چیک by چچه . This is preferable because the former means " chirping or peeping ", while the latter means " warbling ". On the other hand the fact that other sources substitute cicada for the nightingale of the anecdote leads us to believe that چیر چیر is the correct word to be selected, as it means " chirr ", which represents the trilling sound of a grasshopper or cicada. ( The P. name for the latter insect is چیر چیرک or, more properly چیر چیرک دشتی ). Moreover, the replacement of nightingale by cicada provides more logical connections, as the cicada is in greater contact with the ant than the nightingale.

T. Though Yazd is far off, the measure is here. { From the following anecdote } :-

A native of Yazd was employed as a weaver in a weaving factory in Isfahan. But while at work he used to claim boastfully that he wove so many metres of cloth each day when he was in Yazd. The manager of the factory, who could guess that he was a braggart, only said to him, "Though Yazd is far off, the measure (or metre) is here." By this he meant that there was always an opportunity for him to prove his claim. Cf. همدان دور است etc.

Notes. (1) كز is an ell or metre. (2) A variant form of this pvb. is يزد دور است يا كز؟ i. e. Which is out of reach - Yazd or the metre?

يعنی كشك! I know too well what you mean! { The literal meaning of this phrase, as well as its purpose, may be understood from the following anecdote } :

There was a certain Mullah who had such a great dislike for dried whey that he did not even like to hear its name. In order to provoke him all the more, those who knew him nicknamed him "Mullah Dried Whey". Finally he had to request the local magistrate to issue an order whereby no one should call him by that nickname.

The day after the promulgation of the order when the Mullah was passing in the market-place, some one called him by the nickname "Mullah Sugar Candy", whereupon he retorted, "You mean 'Dried Whey', don't you?"

Note. According to the original P. anecdote, this man was an “Akhond”, i. e. a theologian and tutor, but the title Mullah has been used here because the E. people are more acquainted with the word. The actual nickname, which was given to the man was آخوند کشکی (Akhond Kashki) where کشکی is an adjective derived from كشك (dried whey). Now, since کشکی also means in modern colloquial Persian “phoney or sham”, the nickname might simply have been given to express that he was “no true theologian”.

The third time you are caught in a man's hand.”

{ The story to which this quotation is connected is found in the Book of Persian Tales, which is a translation of 58 Kermani and Bakhtiari tales by D. L. R. Lorimer and E. O. Lorimer. Owing to the exquisite nature of the translation, I am inserting below the exact version, as it appears in that book, more particularly because I feel I have to mention the valuable services of, and pay a tribute to, those who have shown such a keen interest in Persian folklore } :-

“Once upon a time there was a time when there was no one but God.

There was a man who had a wife, and one day she went to the public baths. While she was at the bath she saw a lady of very high rank arrive who gave orders that every one else should be turned out so that she might have the bath to herself. The woman was very much annoyed, and when she came out she asked: “Whose wife was that?” “That,” they said, “is the wife of the King’s Chief Fortune-Teller.”

She went home, caught her husband by the collar of his coat, and said: “Come, go you and become a Fortune-Teller!” “But,” said he, “I can’t become a Fortune-Teller; I don’t know how to divine or to tell fortunes.” “I can’t help that,” retorted she, “either you become a Fortune-Teller or you give me a divorce.” So the husband went off to the bazaar and bought a divining-board and dice and went and sat in the street near the door of the public baths, and put the divining-board in front of him.

Now it chanced that on that very day the King’s Daughter had gone to the bath, and when she was undressing she had given a ring to one of her slave-women to keep for her. For safety the woman had put it in a hole in the wall and had put a little wisp of hair at the mouth of the hole.

When the King’s Daughter came out of her bath she asked for the ring, but the poor slave-woman had meanwhile quite forgotten where she had hidden it and was at her wits’ end. The Princess was very angry, and said: “If you don’t find the ring I’ll have you beaten.” The slave-woman, in terror of a beating, ran out of the baths, and her eye fell on the Fortune-Teller. She was delighted, and went up to him and sat down and told him all about the affair, and said: "Divine now for me and see where the ring is."

Now the unhappy Fortune-Teller hadn't the least idea how to divine, and he began to nod his head and cast the dice, and he looked at the board and wondered and wondered what he should say. As he looked about his eye fell on the woman, and he saw a little rent in her cloak, and through the hole he caught sight of a piece of her hair, so he muttered:

"I see a little hole there,
And in the hole a little hair."

No sooner had he uttered these words than the woman remembered where she had put the ring, and she ran in immediately and found it. And the news of this wonderful Fortune-Teller reached the ears of the King's Daughter, and she told the whole story to her father.

Then the King sent and bade them bring the man, and said: "You shall be my Fortune-Teller in Chief," and he gave him money and a horse and a robe of honour.

Not long after this the King's Treasury was broken into and robbed. Then the King sent for his Fortune-Teller, and said: "You must find me the thieves." The poor man asked for forty days' grace, and came home to his wife and said: "See now what you have done. You have put me in danger of my life, for how am I to find out the thieves? There is nothing for us but to fly at the end of the forty days."

Then, in order not to lose count of the time, he put forty dates into a vessel, and said to his wife: "Bring me one of these dates each evening; when they are exhausted, that very night we shall fly."

Now the thieves heard that the Chief Fortune-Teller had promised the King to find them out. There were forty thieves, and they were very much afraid. The leader said to one of them: "Go to the house of the Chief Fortune-Teller and see what he is doing." The thief came to the Fortune-Teller's house and crept up on the roof and began to listen. Now it happened that at that very moment the wife brought one of the dates and gave it to her husband, and he said: "The first of the forty, my dear." And the thief, when he heard these words, thought the Fortune-Teller meant to say: "The first of the forty thieves has come," and he was terrified, and fled and brought the news to his leader.

Next evening he sent two men together to find out what was happening, and just as before they heard the Fortune-Teller say to his wife: "Two of the forty, my dear," and, in short, so it went on each evening till the fortieth.

On the last day the leader of the thieves said: "I'll go myself to-night." At the very moment that he got on the roof and began to listen it happened that the wife brought her husband the last of the dates, which was also the biggest of them all, and gave it into his hand. And he said: "Well, well, to-night it's the last and the biggest of the lot." When the thief heard these words he thought the Fortune-Teller meant to say: "To-night the leader of the thieves has come." He was greatly frightened, and came down quickly and went in and began to beg and implore the Fortune-Teller, saying: "We'll give back the whole treasure safely into your hands for you to restore to the King on condition that you do not reveal our names."

The Chief Fortune-Teller was extremely delighted, and took all the moneys and treasures and precious stones, and went early in the morning and brought them to the King. And the King gave him money and presents and robes of honour.

Now after some time the King went out hunting one day. While he was hunting he saw a locust and tried to catch it, but it escaped. A second time he tried, again it leaped away. The third time, however, he caught it and held it tight in the hollow of his fist. He came up to the Fortune-Teller and asked: "What is it I've got in my hand?" The unfortunate man turned yellow with fear and began to cast his dice, and, thinking of his own history, began to mutter:

“ You hopped off safely once , little locust ,
You hopped off safely twice , little locust ,
The third time you are caught in a man’s hand. ”

The King naturally imagined that the Fortune-Teller was answering his question and was greatly pleased , and gave him gifts in plenty. But the Chief Fortune-Teller thought within himself that he must do something to prevent their setting him any more problems.

One day he was sitting in the bath , and he thought to himself : “ I’ll pretend to be mad. I’ll run along just as I am into the King’s castle , and embrace the King , and carry him out in my arms. Then he will say : ‘ The fellow’s mad ’ , and they’ll ask me no more questions , but leave me in peace. ”

So he went and did as he had said. Scarcely had he seized the King in his arms and carried him out of the castle when the roof of the King’s chamber fell in with a crash. Thereupon said the Fortune-Teller : “ I was just sitting in my bath casting my dice when I saw - the roof of the King’s chamber is going to fall in and he will be killed ! That was why I didn’t even wait to put on my clothes but ran hither naked as I was and saved the King’s life. ”

The King was very grateful , and gave him money and great wealth.

Some time afterwards the wife of the Fortune-Teller went to the bath in great state. She caught sight of the wife of the former Fortune-Teller in Chief and she ordered that they should turn her out of the bath. This she did in revenge for the past.

And now my story has come to an end , but the sparrow never got home. ”

يك خشت هم بگذار درش T. Put also an unbaked brick on top of the pot. { From the following anecdote } :-

A newly-married woman, who did not know cookery at all, and who had been ordered by her husband to cook a certain dish, found herself obliged to ask one of her neighbours to give her a verbal recipe for the required dish. But while she was being told the various instructions, after hearing each one she used to say proudly, "I knew as much myself", instead of expressing her thanks to her neighbour. The latter finally grew angry at such ingratitude, and closed up the recipe by saying, "When you have done all this, put an unbaked brick on top of your pot."

The proud and silly woman believed the last instruction as well, and acted accordingly. But the steam from the pot gradually softened the brick until it fell down into the pot, and so the food was mixed with earth.

Note. The phrase is cited in cases when a person who has learned something from another, rather than being grateful for it, pretends to have known it herself before. It amounts to saying, "If you had known it yourself, why did you ask?"

يك داغ دل بس است برای قبيله ای T. A single bereavement is enough to affect a whole family.

Note. The second hemistich to this is روشن شود هزار چراغ از فتيله ای

يك دشمن زياد است صد دوست كم است One enemy is too many ,
a hundred friends are too few.

Notes. ( 1 ) The E. has “ One enemy is too much for a man in a great post , and a hundred friends are too few.” If the words in italics are taken out the E. becomes an exact equivalent of the P. ( 2 ) A variant form of this pvb. is صد دوست كم است يك دشمن بسيار است

يكدم نشد كه بى سر خر زندگى كنيم F. T. There was never a moment when we could live without an intrusive bore.
{ Cited in similar instances } .

Note. The first ( or second ) hemistich to this is ؛ ابليس كى گذاشت كه ما بندگى كنيم ؟ us to worship ( God ) .

يك ده آباد به از صد ده خراب T. One inhabited village is better than a hundred ruined ones.

يك ديوانه سنگى را بچاه مى اندازد صد عاقل نمى توانند آنرا در آورند
A fool may throw a stone into a well , which a hundred wise men cannot pull out.

Note. The E. also has “ Fools tie knots, and wise men loose them”, the second part of which should be made to read in this case “and a hundred wise men cannot loose them.”

يك رعايت (با عنايت) قاضى به از هزار گواه on the part of the judge is worth more than a thousand witnesses.

يك روده راست در شكمش نيست T. He hasn't got a single straight intestine ( i. e. He is a confirmed liar ) .

Cf. the E. He lies as fast as a dog ( or horse ) can trot.

Note. The P. phrase is of a jocular nature , as , indeed , the bowels are mostly sinuous.

يك روز بخر ز آنچه فروشى همه سال F. T. Buy one day some of the things you have been selling throughout the year
( i. e. It is time for you to reap what you have so far sown ) .
E. E. As you sow , so shall you reap.

one day ; ( but ) we pray for your health for a hundred years. { Said by a guest who intends to lessen his host's worry } .

T. يك زبان داری دو گوش ، یکی بگو دو تا بنیوش tongue and two ears ; say a single word and hear two.
E. E. Wide(r) ears and a short tongue.

Notes. (1) بنیوش is the imperative of the verb نوشیدن “ to listen or hear ” . (2) The thought of hearing more and talking less has been nicely expressed in the following quatrain by Baba-Afzal :

کم گوی و بجز مصلحت خویش مگو
چیزیکه نپرسند تو از پیش مگو
دادند دو گوش و يك زبانت ز آغاز یعنی که دو بشنو و یکی پیش مگو which may be freely translated as follows :

Speak little and say what is best ;
Speak only when you're spoken to ;
Listen twice and speak only once ,
As the tongue is one and the ears are two.

F. T. يك سال بخور نان و کره ، هر سال بخور نان و کره bread and leek for one year, you can eat bread and butter every year. { Being thrifty for a short time makes one prosperous for a much longer period } .

Note. A variant form of this pvb. replaces نان و کره by مرغ و بره i. e. chickens and lambs.

T. يك ستاره در هفت آسمان ندارد
all the seven skies. { Said of a very indigent person } .

Note. ستاره (star) may also be taken to mean a good or lucky star , and hence the phrase could also be taken to mean “ He is very unlucky or ill-starred. ”

F. T. يك سر دارد و هزار سودا
He is single-handed , but has a thousand affairs to attend to. (Lit.) He has one head

يك سيب را كه به آسمان پيندازند چندين چرخ
T. An apple thrown into the air turns many times (before it falls back to the ground) .

E. E. There is many a slip betwixt the cup and the lip.

يك شب تب يك شب مرگ T. One night fever , and the next night death. { This is often preferred to being confined to bed for a long time , and wearying the attendants , with no hopes of recovery } .

يك شكم سير بهتر از ده شكم نيم سير F. T. Better fill one stomach than keep ten half-filled. Cf. يك ده آباد etc.

يك شكم و دو منت ! F. T. One should not be under a double obligation for a single meal.

يك شهر و دو نرخ ! T. A single town and two different rates ! { Cited in similar instances , and , proverbially , when equal circumstances are governed by different rules } .

Cf. قربان برم خدا را etc.

يك صبر كن و هزار افسوس مخور F. T. A moment's patience saves a thousand regrets.

Note. In this phrase صبر which is properly the main element of the compound verb صبر کردن " to wait " , has also partaken of the nature of an independent substantive , preceded by the numeral يك " one " - which seems to be bad grammar .

يك صبر و دو فوت F. T. "One instance of patience and two blows of breath are always welcome". {From the following anecdote}:-

A man once had a greedy guest, who, when meat was served, put a hot piece of it into his mouth without blowing at it. While he could not stand the burning meat, he was too bashful to throw it out, and hence raised his head toward the roof, rolling the meat in every part of his mouth. He was finally noticed in that posture by the host, and was forced to invent the question, "How many timbers are in that roof?" "One instance of patience and two blows of breath", was the shrewd answer.

بعد از چهل { Apply يك عمر گدائی کرده هنوز شب جمعه را نمیداند } يك عمر گدائی کرده هنوز شب جمعه را نمیداند etc. , substituting 'a whole lifetime' for 'after forty years'.

! T. One dish of kachi and a hundred pipers! { See explanations of سرنا (چی) and کاجی on pages 321 and 258 respectively }.

Note. The connection of کاجی -food prepared for parturient women-and سرنا چی - a piper or oboist - is explained by the fact that roving pipers used to enter houses of parturient women to entertain congratulating guests, and were in all probability given a portion of the kachi.

يك كلاغ (را) چهل كلاغ كردن T. To (exaggerate and) make forty crows of one. {From the following anecdote}:-

A man, who had found a treasure-trove, intended to confide the secret to his wife. But before doing so, he wished to try her in order to make sure that she was a good confidante. So one day he said to her, "Darling, to-day while I was easing nature a crow flew out of my bottom, but this is a secret that you must keep to yourself." "All right", said his wife, "you may be sure it will not be divulged."

However, the woman gave out the secret to her neighbour, to whom she said, "A pair of crows have flown out of my husband's bottom." The neighbour, in her turn, told the story to another neighbour, making the number of crows to be three. And so went the story from mouth to mouth until the number of the crows reached forty. { Story showing how rumours are exaggerated }.

يك كلوخ صد كلاغ را بس است { Same as هزار كلاغ etc. save that here "a hundred" has been substituted for "a thousand" }.

يك گز مطبخ به از صد گز طویله F. T. Better a small kitchen than a large stable (i. e. a great number of livestock). Cf. آفتابه لگن etc.

E. E. (a) It is a Barmecide feast. (b) Much bruit, little fruit.

Notes. (1) گز is an ell or metre. (2) "Bruit" is an archaic word meaning "rumour" or "report".

يك گز و دو فاخته E. E. To kill two birds with one stone.

T. One stick and two cuckoos. Cf. با يك تير etc.

يك گوشش در است و يك گوشش دروازه E. E. ( With him it goes) in at one ear and out at the other. Cf. اذ اين گوش etc.

T. One of his ears is a door, and the other a gate.

يك لاش كـرديم نرسيد دولاش مي كـنيم برسد F. T. When we stretched it out it was not enough for one length; so now we will double it. {Originally referring to dressing or suiting material, and proverbially applicable to cases when one resorts to difficult means for doing a thing after he has failed to do it by an easy means }.

يك مرده بنام به كه صد زنده به ننگ [؟] F. T. A dead person leaving a good name after himself is better than a hundred persons who live disgracefully. Cf. مردن بعزت etc.

يك مرید خـسر به از يك تـوبره زر T. It is better to have a silly follower (or devotee) than a bag of gold.

Notes. (1) توبره is properly a nose-bag. (2) A variant form of this pvb. reads as follows :

يك مرید خر بهتر از يك ده ششدانگی است where the last part means "than an entire village."

يك مسجد و يك قندیل ؟
F. T. A mosque with a single lamp?
{ Cited in similar instances }.

Note. قندیل ( ghendeel ) is a kind of obsolete lamp using oil and wick, and being suspended from a ceiling. It was mostly used in mosques. The word seems to be an Arabicized form of the Latin candela.

يك مو از خرس كندن غنیمت است
F. T. To pluck even one hair from a bear is a success (lit. booty). { This means that it is worth while to take any small sum from the miser }.
E. E. From a bad paymaster get what you can.

Note. The pvb. begins also with موئی

مو را طناب كردن or يك مو را يك طناب كردن
( Same as موئی را طناب كردن )

يك مویز و صد قلندر ؟
T. One currant and a hundred calenders?
Cf. يك آهو و صد سگ & يك مسجد و يك قندیل

Note. Calender is from قلندر ghalandar, Arabicized form of the P. كلندر - a mendicant dervish.

يك نه بگو نه ماه رودل مكش
F. T. Once you say, "No!" you will not have to bear the burden (of pregnancy) for nine months. { One refusal prevents a hundred reproaches - in this case "bad results" }.

Notes. (1) "No" is the word of refusal by a woman who is wooed in marriage by a man. (2) A variant form of this pvb. replaces 'رودل (burden) on the stomach' by بدل (to suffer). (3) مكش is the negative imperative from كشدن "to suffer".

يك و يگانه خل و دیوانه (است)
E. E. He who has but one son makes him a fool.

F. T. One who is single, or the only-begotten child of his father, is half-witted or mad.

Note. The E. vb. is often cited with the following introduction: "He who has but one hog makes him fat", which is considered unnecessary for the purpose on hand.

يك يار يار به از صد برادر ناسازگار T. A true friend is better than a hundred unsociable brothers.

E. E. Many kinsfolk, few friends. { See also the proverbs containing the word دوست }.

يكی از گرسنگی ميميرد يکی از سیری می ترکد T. One dies from hunger, another bursts from surfeit.

Note. Dehkhoda gives the variant form

يكی از سیری ميميرد يکی از گرسنگی in which the word "bursts" does not come.

يكی با صد آید نه صد با يکی { نظامی } F. T. One goes with a hundred, not vice versa. { Small quantities are usually added to larger ones }.

E. E. All strive to give to the rich man.

يكی بیچه اش گفت قربان چشم های بادامیت برم

F. T. When the woman said to her child, "What beautiful almond-shaped eyes you've got!" he said, "Mummy, I want some almonds." { Said in cases when the mention of a thing suggests another thing, which is not in the same train of thought }.
Cf. the next entry.

Note. In view of the fact that the expression "hazel eyes" is also used in E., one may replace "almond" by "hazel", and make the child want "hazel-nuts".

يكی بیچه اش گفت میز نمت زمین صدای کنیزه بدهی

F. T. When the woman said to her child, "I'll knock you down and squash you", he said, "Mummy, I want some lemon-squash." { Refer to the preceding entry }.

Note. کنیزه (kombezeh) or کنیزه means "unripe melon", which, when forcibly thrown down, is broken open with a great noise.

یکی بچه گرگ می پرورید چو پرورده شد خواجه را بردرید [ سندی ]

F. T. A certain man was fostering a wolf's cub ; but when it grew up it devoured the fosterer.

E. E. 1) (Same as for نوازی چو کر به etc.) 2) He brought up a bird to pick out his own eyes.

T. A certain person , while being bastinadoed , cried , O my back ! " " Why do you mention your back , " he was asked , " while it is your feet which are suffering ? " " Because " , he replied , " Had I some one to back me ,

I would not be beaten on my feet”

Note. The beauty of the P. is accounted for by the pun on the word پشت ‘back,’ which, in its figurative sense, means “one who backs or supports a person”.

یکسرا نوش دیگرری را نیش E. E. One man’s meat is another man’s poison.

T. It is a wholesome drink to one, and a (poisoned) sting to another.

یکی روز چهارشنبه پول پیدا کرده بود میگفت چهارشنبه خوب روزی است، دیگری پول گم کرده بود می گفت چهارشنبه بد روزی است

F. T. He who finds money on Wednesday says it is a lucky day; while he who loses money on that day says it is an unlucky day. {The experience of individuals forms a basis for their judgment}.

Note. Budakhsban is a place between Khorassan and India, noted for its rubies.

اگر گفتن سیم است خاموشی زر است T. If speech is silver, silence is gold.

E. E. Silence is gold.

Note. The saying سخن زر است سکوت گوهر است, which is given under سخن and which means "If speech is gold, silence is jewels", is much to be preferred to the one given here.

اگر مردی سرر دسته هاون را بشکن F. T. I defy you to break the head of the pestle. { From the following anecdote }:

Molla-Nassreddin's head, which was said to have been bald, was wounded one day during a hail storm by some very large hailstones. When he went home, he saw in the kitchen a mortar in which there was a pestle. He took the pestle, and, directing its thick end to the sky, he said, "O Lord of Heavens, I defy thee to break the head of this pestle, if thou canst."

Notes. (1) The saying, though rather blasphemous, teaches that it is not fair or gentlemanlike for a person to oppress one who is far below him in strength. Cf. آنرا چه زنی etc. (2) The phrase اگر مردی literally means "If thou art a man".

☆ الخائف خائف { Add the following }

E. E. (a) He that commits a fault thinks every one speaks of it. (b) A guilty conscience feels continual fear.

☆ الهی هیج سفره ای یک نانه نباشد F. T. May there be no table with only one loaf of bread on it! (i. e. May there be no man with only one child).

☆ امشب همه شب کدمچه زدی کدو حلوا ؟ F. T. You have been applying the ladle all night; where is then the dish? [Said to one who has struggled in vain through greed or other motives]. Cf. آنقدر چریدی etc.

☆ امید کسیرا نا امید کردن To dash one's hopes.

☆ انشاء الله بز است T. I trust it is a goat. {See Notes appended to the following anecdote} :-

One early morning a certain sheikh was going to the mosque to say his matins. On the way he was splashed by the water shaken off the body of a dog which had fallen into a stream. This, according to Moslem rites, disqualified the sheikh for prayer, for his clothes were now ceremonially unclean.

But the sheikh, feeling there was not much time left for him to go and change his clothes, ignored the pollution caused by the dog, and muttered, "I trust it was a goat."

Notes. (1) A variant form replaces "goat" by "cat". (2) The dog is usually considered unclean by the Mohammedans. The cat, however, is not so; much less the goat.

(3) The quotation is used when a person ignores an obvious fact, and tries, so to speak, to deceive himself.

این کجا و آن کجا There is no comparison between the two; this is not ( to be ) a patch on that one.

انگار نه انگار که خر ما از کرگی دم داشت F. T. We will consider as if the ass had no tail from the time it was a foal. {See خر ما از کرگی دم نداشت and the story appended to it }.

انگشت نمای خلق شدن E. E. To be ( come ) a by - word ( for one's notorious acts ) .

F. T. To become so notorious that every one points to one by his finger.

اوقاتش تلخ شد He got angry or sad; he was upset. ( Lit. ) His times ( i. e. humour ) became bitter.

اهل بخیه است F. T. He comes in the stitching trade ( i. e. he is not a layman with regard to the trade ). { From the following anecdote } :-

A king had once ordered all the tailors of the town to be summoned to the court, and a certain pack-saddle-maker also had managed to join them. When he was asked why he had mixed himself with the tailors, he answered that he, too, was a member of the trade, because he and all the tailors stitched. Cf. خیاطان را احضار کرده بودند. etc. and the E. E. given for same.

Notes. (1) According to the anecdote, the expression اهل بخیه است implies that such a person knows something about the matter, but it usually means that he is conversant ( or acquainted ) with it. (2) The expression اهل بخیه is rather of a jocular nature, and there has been a tendency to use it with an indecent implication.

ای تهی دست رفته در بازار ترسمت پرنیاوری دستار {سعدی}
T. O thou who goest empty-handed to the market, I am afraid thou wilt not bring back a full handkerchief (or turban). (More neatly) He who is empty-handed cannot be expected to come back from the market with a full handkerchief.

Note. Some texts replace پرنیاوری by بازناوری in which case the last part would mean, "I fear thou wilt not bring back your turban (or handkerchief)".

ای گرفتار و پای بند عیال دگر آسودگی میند خیال {سعدی}
T. O thou who art encumbered with a family; do not think any more of tranquillity (or freedom). (More freely) Encumbered with a family, entangled by care and worry.

F. T. The longer part of the thread (or rope) is yet to come.

این شتر را در خانه دیگری بخوابان F. T. Lead this camel to another man's door, and make him kneel there (i. e. I am not the man for it; I am not equal to the task). {From the following anecdote}: -

A man once found a camel loaded with much gold and silver. He led the camel to his house, and took off the load, which he hid in a safe place. As he was unable to keep the animal, he took it out by night and intended to cause it to kneel at some one's door. But as soon as he chose a house at random, and was about to carry out his plan, the owner of the house appeared, and said, "I beg your pardon, sir, will you please cause your camel to kneel at another man's door? "

تعارف شاه عبدالعظیمی T. An offer or compliment by a native of Shah-Abdol-Azim (i. e. an insincere offer or invitation).

Note. Shah-Abdol-Azim is a village south of Tehran, with a shrine, which contains the tomb of an Imam's descendant. It is said that the villagers, who are not very hospitable, are in the habit of swearing their guests by the holy shrine as to whether they intend to stay with them any longer, thus suggesting to them their unwillingness to entertain them.

* تعارف کم کن و بر مبلغه افزای [Add the following]:

E. E. Less of your courtesy and more of your purse.

* تعریف خود کردن پنبه جاویدن است [Add the following]:

تلنگر زدن { Colloquial } To fillip.

تلو تلو خوردن { Colloquial } To stagger. To totter.

تن آدمی شریف است بجان آدمیت
T. A man's body is ennobled by his soul; it is not merely fine clothes that distinguish the man.

E. E. ( Same as for همین لباس etc. )

تن بکار دادن To apply oneself to work; put one's shoulder to the wheel.

تن در دادن To yield or submit.

تنش به تن فلان خورده است He has taken after such a one in character or behaviour. (Lit.) His body has touched that of such a person.

Note. A variant form substitutes تنه for تن

تنگ ( یا تنگه ) فلان را نمیتوان خرد کرد One cannot bear the exorbitant expenses of such a person.

Note. The correct meaning of this phrase is rather obscure, but since تنگ means an "ass-load", the expression may have originated in a mill, the idea being that the mill cannot cope with the excessive quantity of grains loaded by such a person.

تا { Compound colloquial word } Spirits. Example : خود را از تنگ و تا نینداخت He saved his face; he joined in the laugh.

تو آن وَر جو من این وَر جو T. I am on this side, and you are on the other side, of the stream (i. e. Although we have not come to an understanding, we can be at peace

تو بحر چیزی مافتن To ponder over something.

Note. بحر, literally means "sea", and hence the original sense conveyed by this expression is "to dive into something".

توبه نصح Sincere or true repentance.

Note. نصح, as used in the Koran, means "unalloyed and sincere", but folklore has brought into existence a man by that name, proverbial for his true repentance.

توپی آمدن { Slang } To bluff; also, to let off hot air.

تو خط چیزی بودن { Colloquial } To think of, or be interested in, something. Example : او تو این خط ها نیست

تو زدن To back out. To take one's hands off. To go back on a bargain.

تو نخ چیزی رفتن To ponder over something; also, to look at something with subtlety. { Originally same as تو بحر رفتن with "sting" for بحر }.

تو نیز اگر بخفتی به که در پوستین خلق افندی [ سعدی ] F. T. You had better sleep and not backbite people.

Notes. 1) The phrase در پوستین کسی افتادن literally means "to fall in some one's fur cloak". In the translation of Golestan by Platts it is observed that this originally signifies "to uncloak or expose the faults" of some one. 2) The word نیز "also" has been left out in the translation; as it can only be connected with the relevant story in the Golestan.

تو نیکی میکن و در درجله انداز که ایزد در بیابانت دهد باز [سعدی]
T. Do good and throw (your bread) in the Tigris, and God will repay you in the desert. {Cf. the Hebrew pvb. by King Solomon, which reads as follows: "Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days"}. .

توی تنبانش رید His breeches made buttons; he was scared to death.

توی (جلد کسی افتادن) To persuade some one to do a thing by tempting him constantly. (Lit.) To fall into some one's skin.

توی حول ولا افتادن [Colloquial] To be in a flutter; to be agitated or disturbed.

Note. The words حول and لا are taken from the A. phrase لا حول ولا قوة الا بالله which means "There is neither might nor strength but in God", and which is uttered in cases of amazement, confusion, anger, etc. It seems, therefore, that the real meaning of the expression is "to be stuck between the words حول and لا (from confusion or agitation)".

توی (خمیازه گذاشتن) To leave in the lurch; also, to disappoint. (Lit.) To leave in a gaping or yawning condition.

توی دل کسی جا کردن [Colloquial] To win some one's heart. (Lit.) To find a place in some one's heart.

توی ذوق زدن To be repulsive.

Notes. (1) ذوق literally means taste or elegance. (2) This expression should not be confused with توی ذوق کسی زدن which means "to snub some one, or discourage him by preventing him from showing his talent".

تو (ی) قالب است It is in the mould ; it is being shaped.
{Said ironically to one who has an excessive or unreasonable demand. It amounts to saying , “ In vain you are expecting ” }

تیغ زدن { Slang } To touch for ; get ( money ) out of. (Lit.)

1) To strike with a sword. 2) To incise ; notch ; gash.

ث

ثواب مکن کباب میشی F. T. Don't try to do good , or you will burn your fingers.

Notes. (1) ثواب originally means “ (spiritual) reward”, but has come to mean “ a good deed (deserving a spiritual reward) ”. (2) میشی is a colloquial contraction of میشوی and better suits the rythm of the phrase. (3) Although it is practically true that in doing good to others we may injure ourselves, the phrase is not morally a good maxim to follow , and it is , mostly , the riming words ثواب and کباب which make the phrase worthy of mention.

ج

جا بجا [With the stress on the first syllable]. 1) On the spot ; instantly. 2) As the case may be.

جا خالی کردن To give way. To sidestep. (Lit.) To make one's place empty.

{هم چشمی کردن} چشم و هم چشمی کردن To keep up (with another person); emulate or vie.

چکشی جوابدادن To answer in a harsh or stiff manner (lit. like a hammer).

Note. چکشی which has been used here as an adverb, is originally an adjective. Thus جواب چکشی means a harsh answer.

چك و چانه اش بوی الرحمن گرفته است E. E. He has one foot in the grave.

Notes. الرحمن (arrabman) is the title of a certain chapter (or Surah) of the Koran, which is recited for the soul of a dead person. چك و چانه means "chops or jaws".

بوی چیز را گرفتن means to get the smell of something, and figuratively, to savour or smack of something. The combination of these gives the idea that the person in question is nearing the time when his jaws must be closed, which is done when a man dies, and the above Surah is to be recited for his soul. Cf. بوی حلواش بلند است or بوی حلواش میباید.

چل چلی خود را کردن ( Slang ) To sow one's wild oats.

چم کسیرا بدست آوردن E. E. (1) To find (or know) the length of one's foot. (2) To get round a person.

Note. چم is the imperative root of چمیدن "to strut", and چم و خم has come to mean "coquettish elegance".

Hence چم کسیرا بدست آوردن perhaps means originally "to find out the coquettish moods of some one."

چم و خم ( 1 ) [ See in Note under the preceding entry ].

2) Knack ; trick.

چنته اش خالی شده است He is at the end of his tether.

I

idle away one's time 526 , 665
 If a man cheats me once , shame on him ; if he cheats me twice , shame on me. 36
 If my aunt had been a man , she'd have been my uncle. 32 , 161
 If the counsel be good , no matter who gave it. 371
 If the eyes do not admire , the heart will not desire [of Italian origin]. 244
 If things were to be done twice , all would be wise. 652.
 If thou seest aught amiss in another , mend it in thyself. 358
 If wishes were horses , beggars might ride. 33
 If you can kiss the mistress , never kiss the maid. 203
 If you heat spice , it will smell sweeter. 303
 If you pay not a servant his wages , he will pay himself. 654
 If you save a rogue from the gallows , he will rob you that same night. 142 , 262 , 264.
 If youth only knew ; if old age only could. 41 , 105
 If you trust before you try , you will repent before
